ANTI-RED FORCES NOW IN PETROGRAD, STOCKHOLM HEARS

Yudenitch Said to Have Entered Suburbs on Thursday Afternoon.

BRITISH LACK ADVICES

But Official Reports Show a Heavy Attack on a Wide Front South of the Capital.

MOSCOW TELLS OF FIGHTING

Bolsheviki Place the Scene of Action 35 Miles West and 16 Miles South of Petrograd.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 17.—A dispatch received here this evening says that the army of General Yudenitch entered the suburbs of Petrograd at 3 o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

LONDON, Saturday, Oct. 18.—Up to the present hour (12:20 A. M.) the British authorities have received no confirmation of the report of the entry of General Yudenitch's forces into the suburbs of Petrograd on Thursday. The belief was expressed that General Yudenitch's men had not advanced so far as the former Russian capital.

The Helsingfors correspondent of The Daily Mail, in a dispatch sent at 2 o'clock Friday morning, claims to have authentic information that neither Petrograd, Gatchina, nor Pskov has been taken. He gives details to show that the anti-Bolshevist troops have not yet crossed the railroad running between Gatchina and Pskov.

The correspondent intimates that the various rumors now current are due to financial speculators. He says a brisk business is being done on the Bourse by a crowd which is "bulling" rubles.

A Bolshevist official communication, issued Thursday evening and received here by wireless, reports stubborn fighting ten versts (about six and a half miles west of Krasnaia Gorka (thirty miles west of Petrograd on the Gulf of Finland) and in the regions of Krasnoye Selo (sixteen miles south of Petrograd) and Gatchina (twenty-nine miles south,) and also thirty-five versts (about twenty-three and a half miles) northeast of Pskov.

A wireless dispatch from Moscow says eleven "enemy" torpedo boats are bombarding Krasnaia Gorka.

An official Russian statement, received in Stockholm, confirms the capture of Gatchina and Krasnaia Gorka, on the coast of the Gulf of Finland, by General Yudenitch. Gatchina was stormed after a short bombardment, the Bolsheviki fleeing when the Northwestern army charged bayonets.

General Yudenitch's army is penetrating eastward well to the south of Petrograd, according to advices received by the War Office here. It was announced at that office yesterday that its latest information showed the Northwestern Russian army had reached a point within three miles of Luga, on a line directly south of Petrograd and about eighty miles from that city.

General Yudenitch began his advance on Oct. 11 with six columns. Two of the columns operated along the Gatchina Railroad and southward thereof and two columns worked their way toward Luga, while the remaining two marched to the right and rear.

On Oct. 12 the two central columns had captured the Bolshevist first line, westward of Luga, and advanced within ten miles of the town despite tenacious resistance of the Bolsheviki.

General Yudenitch has advanced some thirteen or fourteen miles within four days.

General Yudenitch has been reinforced by troops commanded by Prince Peter Lieven and volunteers from Archangel, who now form the guard of the advance on the former Russian capital, according to a Helsingfors dispatch.

Doubt That Kronstadt Is Taken.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—Finnish rumors of the surrender of Kronstadt to the British fleet and of the fall or evacuation of Petrograd itself, appear, at least premature, if not without foundation. Nothing is known at the British Admiralty tonight of any bombardment of Kronstadt by British warships.

Asked if the story might be characterized as an intelligent anticipation, a high official replied: "No, not even that."

Bolshevist propaganda was being radiated today by the wireless station at Tsarskoe Selo, fifteen miles south of Petrograd, says the Wireless Press, which makes it difficult to accept the report that General Yudenitch has reached that town in his advance on Petrograd.

Petrograd Taken, Washington Hears.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Assistant Secretary of State Long, who has jurisdiction over the Russian bureau of the State Department, announced this afternoon that the Government had received from a Consul in Sweden near the Russian border information to the effect that both Petrograd and Kronstadt had been captured by the anti-Bolshevist forces.

Up to tonight the State Department was without official confirmation of the report. Another Government report, re-

Japan to Spend $125,000,000 in Developing Aviation Service

TOKIO, Sept. 17. (Associated Press.)—The Japanese Government is preparing to appropriate the equivalent of $125,000,000 for the development of aviation, the amount to be expended over four or five years. Interest in aviation has been stimulated here by the special French aviation corps which is teaching the Japanese Army.

Japan is backward in aviation, and the fact that she is subscribing such a large amount of money indicates her intention to try to attain the place in aviation occupied by the other great powers.

CHEER GEN. WOOD FOR PRESIDENCY

Mention of "Rough Rider's" Name Greeted by an Ovation at Roosevelt Meeting.

TRAMPLE ON REDS, HE SAYS

"Kill Radicalism as You Would a Rattlesnake," He Urges His Hearers.

Major Gen. Leonard Wood, commander of the Central Department, whose troops have been active in quelling the race riots in Omaha and radical labor disturbances during the steel strike, in Gary, Ind., came to New York last night to be the principal speaker at a mass meeting in Carnegie Hall under the direction of the Women's Roosevelt Memorial Association. The meeting was designed to start the campaign to raise $1,000,000 to restore and perpetuate Theodore Roosevelt's birthplace at 28 East Twentieth Street.

General Wood, as Colonel Roosevelt's lifelong friend, devoted a large part of his speech to a sketch of Roosevelt the American, dwelling on the former President's outspoken condemnation of anything but absolute patriotism. In the course of his speech, the General took occasion to point to lessons lately learned by the men under him in dealing with lawlessness and disorder engendered by anarchist agitators.

"There is no room in this country for the red flag," he said at one point. "It is against everything which this Government stands for, the home, the town, the nation. Kill it as you would a rattlesnake, and smash those who follow it, speak for it or support it. They are enemies of the State and dangerous enemies."

The meeting gave General Wood a tremendous ovation. When he entered he was cheered for several minutes. After the speaking, a collection for the Memorial Fund was taken up, and one of the first contributions sent in bore the words:

"Here is $100 for the Roosevelt Fund. The giver expresses the hope that Leonard Wood will receive the Republican nomination for President of the United States in 1920."

Cheering Lasts Five Minutes.

It was nearly five minutes before Joseph P. Day, who was announcing the donations, could quiet the cheering that followed the reading of this note. The men and women simply stood up and yelled their enthusiasm for the sentiment.

Mrs. John Henry Hammond presided, and, after a brief explantion of the purposes of the meeting, she introduced a former "Rough Rider," Captain Arthur F. Cosby. Captain Cosby presented to the association an American flag in the name of the Rough Riders. Mrs. Frederick Nathan was then introduced. She told of a disappointment that the Entertainment Committee faced at the last moment.

It seemed, according to Mrs. Nathan, that the 22d United States Infantry band was to play at the meeting, but the President of the Musicians' Union in New York had complained to Colonel Tilson, commanding officer of the regiment and had declared that the soldiers would compete with union musicians. The Colonel then ordered that the band should not appear.

Mrs. Douglas Robinson, Colonel Roosevelt's sister, read a poem, "Sagamore," which described the flight of the members of Quentin Roosevelt's aviation squadron over Sagamore Hill during the funeral services for the Colonel.

General Wood took up first a history of Roosevelt the boy, how he had made himself a strong man because of his unconquerable grit and determination to amount to something for his country. He described the President's firm adherence to orderly government.

"He believed in government under the Constitution," declared the speaker. "He had an abiding, unshaking faith in the Constitution. He told me one day, speaking of the Constitution, that he believed that if its framers were called, in the light of all that is past, to do again their work, they would turn out the same instrument, the instrument which has meant so much to all of us; the instrument which we must guard as we would guard our national existence.

Preaches Undivided Loyalty.

"He believed in one loyalty, an undivided loyalty, and that to the people of the United States. In his opinion no man could be part American and part something else. He did not measure a man's Americanism by length of residence, but rather by the way in which

MAYNARD BREAKS HIS OWN RECORD IN 738-MILE SPURT

Installs New Engine at Night by Light of Bonfires, Then Flies to Cleveland.

TO REACH MINEOLA TODAY

CAPTAIN SMITH OFF AGAIN

Gets Major Spatz's Machine After His Own Burns—Lieut. Kiel Arrives at Bryan, Ohio.

By completing repairs to his wrecked airplane in eighteen hours, which experts said would require at least three days, Lieutenant Belvin W. Maynard, who leads in the army's ocean-to-ocean race, was able to resume his second transcontinental flight yesterday morning.

After taking to the air from the Nebraska cornfield, where he had been forced down on Thursday, Maynard drew forth from his Liberty motor such tremendous bursts of speed that he excelled his previous record over the course of 738 miles between Omaha and Cleveland. He took every short cut and deliberately underwent the hazard of the flight across Lake Michigan upon leaving Chicago, a hop that most fliers avoid in dread of the possible consequences.

Maynard was down for the night at Cleveland, 503 miles from Mineola. Officers at Roosevelt Field said last night they expected him to arrive there late this afternoon, barring accidents. Arrangements were being made last night to send every available airplane from the Long Island fields into the sky to greet the victor as the premier flier of the Army Air Service. If he arrives today Maynard will be the winner of the race on elapsed time, but his time out between control stations, while he was repairing his plane at Wahoo, Neb., caused him to lose his place as leader in actual flying time to Lieutenant E. C. Kiel, who started from Mineola on Wednesday on his second ocean-to-ocean flight.

Smith Gets Spatz's Plane.

Captain Lowell H. Smith, whose actual flying time across the continent, with penalties counted out, was better than the twenty-five hours' official record of Maynard's, started again in the race yesterday after his plane had been destroyed by fire in Buffalo. Smith had started from Mineola on Wednesday afternoon, racing against Major Carl Spatz, who declared that he was not anxious to fly back to the Pacific and who dropped far behind Smith in the first day's flight.

When Smith was negotiating with the Curtiss company for another plane, Major Spatz flew in at the Buffalo control station and the rivals decided to ask Washington to permit Spatz to withdraw and to allow Smith to fly on in the Major's De Haviland-4. Permission was given quickly at Washington, and Smith took to the air immediately, dropping down at Chicago for the night. He said he expected to reach the Pacific on Monday afternoon.

Directly behind Smith are Lieutenant Kiel, now reported to be the leader in the race in actual flying time, and two other formidable opponents, Lieutenant Queen in a De Haviland and Lieutenant R. Worthington in his little single-seater SE-5. Kiel and Queen were down for the night at Bryan, Ohio, one jump from Chicago, and Worthington was reported at Buffalo.

Among Maynard's competitors en route from the Pacific on their second transcontinental flight there was no serious contender for the honor of being first to reach the Atlantic Coast. Lieutenant Alexander Pearson, Jr., his closest rival, had to stop at North Platte, Neb., because of the poor condition of his motor, and probably he will withdraw from the race unless he can install a new motor.

Aviators on the Second Lap.

Captain J. O. Donaldson, also making the flight from the Pacific, was last reported flying between the control stations in Nebraska, having left North Platte at noon. Lieutenant E. M. Manzelmann was down for the night at one of the Wyoming control stations. Lieutenant J. P. Richter, who is making his first flight from the Pacific, flew for a great part of the day with Lieutenant Maynard, both stopping for the night at Cleveland.

Four other aviators reached the Pacific goal, three landing at the Presidio within half an hour, after having raced across the Sierra Nevadas during the morning. Lieutenant H. H. George alighted at 11:13 A. M., Lieutenant T. V. Hynes at 11:41, and Captain J. B. Wright three minutes later. Lieut. Col. Hartney was the fourth arrival.

Officers at Roosevelt Field announced last night that they had received notice from the Air Service in Washington that none of the aviators who fail to finish their first transcontinental flight before this evening would be permitted to attempt the second lap of the contest. Richter may be able to reach Mineola today, and about seven others may be able to reach the Pacific before night, but probably about ten flies will be prevented by the ruling from making a second lap.

It was reported from St. Paul, Neb., yesterday that Lieutenant Cameron Wright, commander of the control station there, had been killed when his

Austria Ratifies Peace Treaty; German Party Alone Opposes It

VIENNA, Oct. 17.—The National Assembly today ratified the Peace Treaty of St. Germain.

The ratification was voted without debate. The German party alone opposed favorable action, that party being a unit in opposition.

BASLE, Oct. 17.—The Austrian Government, says a Vienna dispatch, has introduced in the National Assembly a bill stipulating that the territory assigned to Austria by the Treaty of St. Germain shall be a democratic republic under the name of "The Republic of Austria."

Another provision in the bill abrogates the law of November, 1918, which declared Austria to be an organic part of the German Empire.

COAL CHIEFS BALK ON AGREEMENT

WILL MEET THEM TUESDAY

Brewster, for Operators, Makes Conditions That Lewis, Miners' Chief, Rejects.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Secretary Wilson held an all-day conference today with John L. Lewis, Acting President of the United Mine Workers, and Thomas J. Brewster, President of the Coal Operators' Association, but failed to reach any agreement on a basis to avert the threatened coal strike.

Following this effort, Secretary Wilson tonight asked Brewster and Lewis to have the full Scale Committees of their organizations meet him here Tuesday morning. Each side in accepting this invitation agreed to meet the Secretary, not to meet the other side. There are thirty-two members of the miners' committee, and thirty members of the operators' committee.

Secretary Wilson urged upon Lewis and Brewster, when they met, that they should reconvene the Joint Wage Conference. Lewis thought it was useless so far as the unions were concerned, while the operators' representative in a formal statement offered to meet the mine workers on several conditions. These were that the mine workers would agree to extend the Garfield agreement to March 21, 1920, or until the President issued his proclamation of peace; second, to withdraw their strike order, and third, to waive their demands for shorter hours.

In an interview tonight Lewis commented on the matter thus:

"This action by the operators justified my morning statement to Secretary Wilson and revealed clearly that the operators wish to interpose obstacles. Under the circumstances I told Secretary Wilson that he was wasting his time and effort in trying to bring us together in a conference.

"After this straight refusal by the operators, Secretary Wilson requested that the full wage scale committee of the United Mine Workers of the central coal field, a committee of thirty-two men, meet him at his office in Washington next Tuesday, Oct. 21. At the same time he extended to Mr. Brewster the same request that a similar committee, representing the operators, meet him at the same time. We have agreed to meet the Secretary.

"The position of the mine workers is unchanged. We will stand by our demands. When we meet the Secretary on Tuesday we will be prepared to present our position and to defend our demands. We think the attitude of the operators justifies our contention that the operators do not want to meet us fairly in conference."

In a formal statement Lewis said:

"The operators set forth insuperable obstacles to the negotiation of a wage agreement which has been their consistent attitude for weeks. Consequently they must accept full responsibility for inflicting a coal strike with its manifold hardships on the American people.

"Our policies remain unchanged. Material relief must be given the miners to insure production of coal. You cannot pacify hungry men with high-sounding platitudes or feed under-nourished children with academic philosophy. The human equation must be reckoned with.

"The only way to stop this strike is to give the workers in the mines the degree of consideration to which they are entitled by the impelling force of moral and physical necessity."

In his letter to Secretary Wilson, embodying his proposition, Mr. Brewster said:

"As pertinent to the questions involved, the operators deem it advisable to say that the coal operators of the central competitive field have adhered to the principles and practices of collective bargaining for thirty-three years with the largest body of organized labor in the United States, and it is our opinion that our scale negotiations have broken down and that our contract has been abrogated by the miners' union in their call for a strike Nov. 1, because the present system of collective bargaining does not fix equal responsibility under the law upon the employer and the labor union.

"Our experience teaches us that no set of employers should agree to a system of collective bargaining which does not make both parties to the contract equally liable and responsible for the observance of the terms of such contract."

Secretary Wilson thereupon invited both sides to send their full committee to confer with him on Tuesday.

PIERMEN TIGHTEN GRIP ON SHIPPING; TROOPS MAY COME

Less Than 5,000 Men at Work, and Biggest Union Votes to Stay Out.

MANHATTAN PIERS IDLE

Shipping Board May Use Soldiers on Merchant Vessels as Well as on Transports.

EXPRESS STRIKE SPREADS

Drivers' Walkout Ties Up Long Island—Pressmen Seek Settlement—Scott Denounces "Big 6."

Despite the persistent efforts of union officials to get the striking longshoremen to return to work and the optimistic view they have held that the men would soon give in and wait until Dec. 1 to press further their demands for increased wages, the situation along the waterfronts did not look encouraging yesterday for an early resumption of shipping activities in the Port of New York. The ranks of the returning strikers have not been increased since Wednesday, when 5,000 were estimated by union leaders to be at work, and it is very probable, from the reports yesterday, that a count would show considerably less than this number engaged in loading and unloading cargoes.

An intimation came from the Shipping Board in Washington that troops might be employed to handle the ships at the ports affected by the strike, including New York, as in the case of transports. Steps to this end are in contemplation, it was said in Washington, but nothing official had been received by the Shipping Board at 45 Broadway yesterday afternoon. An official of the board admitted, however, that they were watching with keen eyes the outcome of the voting of members of Local No. 791, as the Federal officials in charge of shipping recognized that this local is representative of the sentiment of all of the longshoremen in the port.

Piermen Vote to Stay Out.

The result of the voting by this local showed the sentiment of those voting to be overwhelmingly in favor of remaining on strike until the demands are met. The vote was 708 against returning to work and 186 for returning, making a total vote of 894 out of a membership of 3,100.

When he heard the result of the action of the local last night, T. V. O'Connor, President of the International Longshoremen's Association, said: "If every one of the 40,000 longshoremen in the port of New York vote to remain out on strike I will still refuse to indorse or support their action in any manner."

When the result of the voting of Local 791 became known last night, some of the officers of the local declared that the vote cast did not represent the true sentiment of the members. Hundreds of members, they said, feared to go near the polls because of the events of the last two days, especially along the waterfront of Brooklyn, where some longshoremen were attacked.

"Well, they did it. Some of them will be peddling shoe laces if they don't look out," was the comment of John F. Riley, Chairman of the Strike Committee and President of the New York District Council. He said that twelve locals out of fifty-four in the Port of New York had voted to return to work, and these, he said, represented at least 14,000 members.

The express strike spread yesterday to Long Island, 140 drivers going out at Jamaica and Flushing. The walkout practically ties up the whole of Long Island, so far as express service is concerned, it is said.

A step toward settling the strike of the press room feeders was taken yesterday when the Press Room Executive Association called a conference with employers for next Monday in an effort to agree upon terms. President Marsden G. Scott of the International Typographical Union issued a statement denouncing the members of Typographical Union No. 6 who have been quitting work to take "vacations." The periodical publishers adopted resolutions appealing to advertisers to co-operate in the struggle against the demands of the unions.

Further delay in the settlement of the laundry strike is expected to result from the action yesterday of the Rough Dry Laundrymen's Association, composed of about twenty steam laundries, in breaking off negotiations with the Hand Laundry Owners' Association, representing about 3,000 hand laundries. An official of the Hand Laundry Owners' Association said that if the hand laundries could get a satisfactory contract with the rough dry laundries, settlement with the strikers could easily be effected and operation resumed next week.

Only One Manhattan Pier Open.

With the single exception of Pier 15, East River, of the United Fruit Company, the Manhattan piers were tied up almost completely yesterday as they have been at any time since the strike of longshoremen began more than a week ago. The work of unloading the San Mateo, which has been docked several days, and the Santa Marta, which arrived Thursday with 50,000 stems of bananas, proceeded satisfactorily yesterday at Pier 15, the police having established a "dead line" on South Street, between Burling Slip and Malden Lane.

There was a little activity among longshoremen at Piers 56 and 57 of the Cunard Line, and the office force of the

PRESIDENT IMPROVES AFTER A SETBACK; DR. YOUNG, GLAND SPECIALIST, CALLED IN; SENATE KILLS LAST OF FALL AMENDMENTS

70 Senators Want Treaty Ratified, Hitchcock Says; Agreement on Reservations Only Logical Outcome

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, who is leading the fight for the ratification of the Peace Treaty, issued tonight through the Washington Bureau of the League to Enforce Peace, a statement canvassing the Senate situation as follows:

The progress of the treaty in the Senate has now become well defined and is gaining speed. The defeat of the Shantung amendment by a majority of twenty revealed the evident purpose of the Senate to reject every textual amendment to the treaty. Within the period of about a week it is probable that all amendments will be disposed of.

At the present time the Johnson amendment is the only remaining committee amendment. When it is beaten the treaty will be open to amendments proposed by individual Senators.

After they are beaten, the Senate, now in committee of the whole, will report the treaty to the Senate, and all that the Senate in formal session will have to consider will be the phraseology of the resolution of ratification. This may be a simple resolution without any qualifications or it may be a resolution with reservations.

There are forty-odd Senators who would like to ratify the treaty without any reservations. There are probably thirty Senators who would like to ratify it with reservations.

Some combination between these two forces is the only logical conclusion of this controversy. Until these two forces unite the treaty must remain before the Senate. When they unite it will be ratified in some form, with possibly as many as twenty Senators voting in the negative.

MORGENTHAU FOR TURKISH MANDATE

Launches Appeal for Us to Take Over Constantinople, Armenia, and Anatolia.

THINKS ALLIES DESIRE IT

Believes Britain Would Grant in Return Equal Rights in Strait of Gibraltar.

Henry Morgenthau, ex-Ambassador to Turkey, returned yesterday after seven months' absence as head of the American Commission to Investigate the Treatment of Jews in Poland, to launch an appeal for the acceptance by the United States of a mandate for Constantinople, Armenia, and Anatolia.

His idea involved the upbuilding of a great American centre in Constantinople as a living example of democracy for the Near East. He expressed hope that that the American people would so appreciate the idealism of the conception that their enthusiasm would overcome opposition to the covenant of the League of Nations.

Admitting he spoke without consultation with the State Department or the British Government since his conception of the idea, Mr. Morgenthau expressed confidence that in exchange for the acceptance of the mandate Great Britain would grant to the United States equal rights in the Straits of Gibraltar. He said he previously had been assured by the "leading statesman" of Great Britain that that nation was willing to accept almost any arrangement which would induce the United States to accept the mandate.

The result of Mr. Morgenthau's investigations in Poland have been cabled to the State Department from Paris, and he declined to discuss his findings, except to say that cable dispatches purporting to summarize them were based upon surmise. Regarding his hopes for the mandate, he said:

"Some of the leading British statesmen are urging our acceptance of such a mandate on our own terms, with a splendid confidence in the expected reasonableness of our demands. From my personal contact, I am convinced of their sincerity in wishing us to share with them the largely increased duties and responsibilities thrown upon the more powerful nations by the war. All the nations are particularly interested in having Constantinople so governed that its problem shall be removed permanently from further conflicts. Only the acceptance of a mandate by the United States would satisfy all.

"Only if we have a chance to establish an active, energetic replica of our own democracy that will spread its influence in every direction, will the imagination and real interest of the Americans be aroused. Our people will expect Great Britain to welcome us in the Mediterranean and the Near East as a full partner, with all rights, privileges and responsibilities. I have thought as to how Great Britain can demonstrate her willingness, and think the best way would be by her giving us an equal control of the Straits of Gibraltar."

Mr. Morgenthau said he felt the mandate should run for thirty years. He estimated the cost to the United States of such an upbuilding in Constantinople as he hoped for at between $300,000,000 and $400,000,000. He believed most of this sum could be raised from the sale of Turkish bonds guaranteed by our Government.

VOTE CLEARS WAY IN TREATY FIGHT

Fall Amendments Are Beaten in the Senate Without Record Ballot.

SHARP DEBATE ON SILESIA

Walsh of Montana Offers a Resolution for Presenting Ireland's Case to League.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Without a record vote the Senate late this afternoon defeated the two amendments to the Peace Treaty proposed by Senator Fall of New Mexico designed to limit American representation on the reparations commission.

The vote came toward the end of a day given over almost entirely to debate on the treaty, which included an attack by Senator Brandegee of Connecticut, on the reported despatch of 5,000 American troops to Silesia, where they would police that country during the plebisicite ordered by the terms of the treaty. Criticism of the proposal to empower the President to send troops to Armenia, contained in a pending resolution introduced by Senator Williams, of Mississippi, was also voiced by Mr. Brandegee.

Senator Walsh, of Montana, introduced a resolution which would instruct the United States Government, when this country becomes a member of the League of Nations, to "present to the Council or to the Assembly of the League the state of affairs in Ireland and the right of its people to self-government." This action was considered to be a significant move from an Administration source to meet the objections of Irish-Americans to the League covenant.

Another development was the receipt by Senator Lodge of word from Colonel E. M. House, who signified his willingness to appear before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee should the Senators wish to hear him. Senator Lodge said that this would be a matter for the committee to determine.

Throughout the day efforts were made by leading Republican Senators to speed action on the treaty. The vote on the Fall amendments was the first result of this activity.

The reading of the treaty will be hurried to completion. This will require about eight hours. A vote on the Johnson and Moses amendments relating to the six votes of the British Empire in the League Assembly is expected toward the end of next week, as several speeches are likely to be made before that question is disposed of.

Talk of Oil Fields in Armenia.

The treaty debate opened shortly after the Senate convened, when Senator Brandegee remarked that he had received many letters asking that something be done to protect the Armenian people from slaughter when British troops are withdrawn.

"Of course, we know, or have been informed through the press, that the British are withdrawing rapidly their forces from Armenia and the Caucasus and have requested this country to send from 100,000 to 200,000 men over there to take the place of the withdrawn British troops," said Mr. Brandegee.

"There are not any undeveloped oil fields in Armenia or Turkey, then?" interrupted Senator Borah.

"The article states that the President is very anxious that we should accept the mandate for Armenia, and therefore I assume that there is no oil, or anything else, of use to this country there," Senator Brandegee replied.

Senator King of Utah interrupted to

DOCTORS RELIEVE WILSON

Operation for Gland Trouble Not Needed at Present.

TREATMENT IS SIMPLIFIED

FACES LONG PERIOD IN BED

President May Be Kept There for Weeks, if Not Months, It Is Asserted.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Concern over the condition of President Wilson was renewed today with a return of the swelling of the prostate gland, which developed several days ago and has served to check the general improvement of his condition during the last two weeks.

Tonight this gland development was reported as being so definitely improved that an operation would not be necessary, for the present at least; but the fact that an operation might have been required today is a sufficient indication of the apprehension that was entertained by the physicians this morning.

The text of tonight's bulletin read:

White House, Oct. 17, 10 P. M.

The President's prostatic gland swelling, referred to in previous bulletins, is definitely improved and causing little discomfort, so that the treatment has been simplified. The kidneys are functioning normally and the heart action is excellent. The temperature, pulse and blood pressure remain normal.

GRAYSON,
YOUNG,
RUFFIN,
STITT,
FOWLER.

The morning bulletin was:

White House, Oct. 17, 12:15 P. M.

The President passed a comfortable night, and is feeling well this morning. His temperature, pulse and respiration rates are normal. The prostatic condition is not as satisfactory as yesterday, and is checking general improvement of the past two weeks.

GRAYSON,
RUFFIN,
STITT.

When the prostatic swelling reappeared this morning in more aggravated form than on Wednesday it was decided to call in Dr. Hugh Hampton Young, Clinical Professor of Urology in the Johns Hopkins Medical School, Baltimore, who is regarded as this country's leading authority on all ailments relating to the prostate gland. Dr. Young reached the White House at 3 o'clock and went into immediate consultation with Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, the President's physician, and Drs. Stitt, Ruffin, and Fowler.

Relieved by Artificial Means.

Tonight the President's condition had been relieved by artificial means, without the use of instruments and without an operation, and Dr. Young left Washington for Baltimore at 9 o'clock. He will return to Washington tomorrow, and Dr. F. X. Dercum of Philadelphia, the eminent neurologist, who has been in consultation in the case, will probably also have another look at the President tomorrow.

Before the arrival of Dr. Young, it had been feared that an operation for prostate gland swelling would be necessary. This operation is one of the most difficult that is attempted and is usually undertaken only as a last resort. However, about the time Dr. Young reached the White House the gland swelling had improved and, after a very careful examination of the patient, Dr. Young decided that it would not be necessary, for the present, to operate.

Dr. Young also made a careful examination of the President's kidney conditions, and after visiting the White House went to the naval laboratory to conduct certain tests. Following this he returned to Baltimore with the understanding that he would return tomorrow afternoon.

The President's three physicians who visited him this morning—Drs. Grayson, Stitt, and Ruffin—felt some apprehension over the gland condition, and decided that it would be better to summon Dr. Young, who is a specialist with an international reputation, before the gland trouble went too far, as it might introduce a complication by affecting the President's kidneys.

The report was current throughout Washington late in the afternoon and until the time when the night bulletin was issued at 10 o'clock that an operation had been performed on the President. This rumor vanished as soon as Dr. Grayson authorized the statement that no operation had been necessary, and that none was for the present considered necessary.

Dr. Young is the specialist who operated upon David R. Francis, the American Ambassador to Russia, for an enlargement of the prostate gland. He also operated on the late "Diamond Jim" Brady when the latter found it necessary to try to obtain a newly built-up stomach.

He is the eighth physician who has been called in to consider the President's case since Mr. Wilson's return from the West. Besides Dr. Grayson, who has general charge of the distinguished patient, the others called have been Dr. Ruffin, a general practitioner; Rear Admiral Stitt, in charge of the Naval Hospital, who is an authority on the blood; Dr. Dercum of Philadelphia, a brain and nerve specialist; Dr. Fowler, who was called in on Wednesday as a specialist in urology; Captain John B. Dannis of the Naval Dispensary, who was called in once early in the case; Dr. de Schweinitz of Philadelphia, an eye specialist, and finally Dr. Young.

It is understood that the examination made by Dr. Young indicated that the President's kidneys had not been involved in any new complication. The complication resulting from the gland swelling had the effect of checking the improvement that had been evident, slow, but steady, during the greater part of last week and early this week.

May Remain in Bed for Weeks.

It can be stated that the President has not yet reached the point where he can be considered out of danger and the indications now are that the extended period during which his doctors declared last Saturday he would have to remain in bed will extend into weeks if not into months, even though he receives the best of care and attention and is restricted to absolute rest.

Dr. Young is a Johns Hopkins graduate who was pathologist to the Thomas Wilson Sanitarium in 1895, and who since that year has been successively resident surgeon and associate surgeon of the Johns Hopkins Hospital and clinical Professor of Urology at the Johns Hopkins University. He is one of the famous group of Hopkins specialists—among them Thayer, Welch, Osler, Kelley and Finney—who have made the Hopkins Hospital and University famous around the world. He is a member of the International Association of Urology, a member of the Association Francaise d'Urologie, and corresponding member of the Deutsche Gesellschaft fur Urologie.

During the war Dr. Young was called into the service as a specialist in his line, and had the rank of Colonel. He happened to be in London when Ambassador Francis was returning from Archangel and it was successfully operated on Ambassador Francis for prostate gland trouble, after several army surgeons had refused to undertake such an operation on the Ambassador at Archangel.

The statement was made tonight that the real nature of the disease from which the President has been suffering is "fatigue neurosis." This is declared to be a functional rather than an organic trouble, and the President is said to have shown signs of it before he went on his Western trip, on one time, it is said to have affected the nerves of one of his arms and to have been responsible for a twitching of the muscles of his face, while on his trip.

DR. H. H. YOUNG TELLS OF WILSON JESTING

Found Him "Tranquil and Comfortable" and His General Condition "Excellent."

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 17.—Dr. Hugh H. Young, on his return late tonight from Washington, said:

"I found the President much better than I had expected from previous impressions which I had got from the public press. He was quite tranquil and comfortable and his general condition was excellent.

"The prostate gland swelling, which has been referred to in the bulletins, was very definitely improved, so that the treatment could be simplified. His cheerfulness and brightness showed that he was distinctly better than for the past few days.

"As an evidence of his alertness, I may mention an amusing incident that occurred. Admiral Grayson remarked to him that he needed a barber. I remarked: 'Why not have the doctor shave you, as they did in olden times, when the surgeons were all barbers?' Whereupon the President quickly remarked: 'They are still barbarous.'"

Dr. Young would not give any indication as to whether an operation would be necessary.

SAYS RAILROADS MUST PROTECT THEMSELVES

Hines Will Not Increase Rates for Benefit of Private Control.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Director General Hines in a telegram from Duluth to his office in Washington tonight replied to a resolution recently adopted by the Association of Railroad Executives at Indianapolis in which they objected to the position taken by the Director General that the Railroad Administration ought not to undertake to increase railroad rates. Mr. Hines declared that the Government war power should not be used to increase rates which would be carried into the period of private control. In his telegram the Director General said, in part:

"The suggestion of the railroad executives that the Railroad Administration make increase in rates can mean only one thing, and that is that the Railroad Administration shall make these increases during Federal control for the sole and exclusive benefit of the railroads under private management after the end of Federal control. This is true because the conclusion has been reached with the approval of the President that it is not in the public interest to make an immediate increase in rates for the purpose of increasing the revenues of the Railroad Administration during Federal control.

"The theory of the Federal control was that the Government would guarantee a rental during Federal control but not afterwards. The idea, of course, was that after Federal control the permanent statutory revisions and procedure would be looked into by the railroad company to secure for themselves adequate compensation. The resolution of the railroad executives in effect takes the position that they are not willing to resort to the permanent statutory provisions to protect their interests but instead they want the President to use his emergency power so as to provide for their compensation after Federal control.

"In view of the extraordinary increases in expenses of all forms of industry under private management there is no basis for demonstrating that the increases in expenses of the Railroad Administration were due to any causes other than those which affected all forms of industry and hence no basis for claiming that a temporary emergency power of rate making during Federal control should be employed for the exclusive purpose of meeting them, after Federal control shall have ended."

EMPLOYERS MAKE COMPROMISE MOVE

Accept Collective Bargaining, with Right to Bar Outside Agents.

WHOLE SUBJECT GOES BACK

Both Proposals on Bargaining Will Be Taken Up by Committee for a Report Monday.

GOMPERS ATTACKS CAPITAL

Just Risen from Sick Bed, He Makes Impassioned Speech in Reply to L. H. Loree.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—In the face of sharp opposition from the labor group, the Industrial Conference adjourned tonight until Monday, after sending back to the Committee of Fifteen two resolutions on the subject of collective bargaining. One was that introduced yesterday, which has the support of the public and labor groups. The other was one offered today by the employers.

The Committee of Fifteen will meet tomorrow in an endeavor to reconcile the differences in the two resolutions. Members of the committee, including Charles Edward Russell, said tonight they considered the variance was slight and that a compromise should be effected. The attitude of labor, whom spoken as voiced by Matthew Woll, was that it was useless to try to alter the resolution submitted Thursday.

The point at issue is that in the employers' resolution is included the right of the employer to refuse to deal with representatives of his employes whom these representatives are not actually from among his employes. This right is not set forth in the resolution from the public group. The employers' resolution allows the right of the employer to agree with his men upon the form of their representative relations.

In two long sessions today the conference argued the resolutions. The employers group declared the public group resolution of Thursday would force an unfair obligation upon an employer, and that recognition of this resolution would be tantamount to a recognition of the right of the American Federation of Labor to constitute the representatives. Delegates from the labor section, replying to this argument, affirmed that the right of employers to choose their own representatives unhampered was something that "must never be denied."

Many speeches were made, one by Samuel Gompers, who made his first appearance since he was taken ill a few days ago. E. H. Gary was not present today.

It was understood tonight that an entirely new resolution will be submitted tomorrow by a prominent member of the public group. This, it was said on excellent authority, would emphasize the right of a worker "not to organize" as being coequal with the right to organize. It was also said that the resolution would provide that the representatives of the workers would be chosen from the entire membership of an individual plant. This resolution is very similar to the ideas of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., on shop committees.

The Employers' Resolution.

The resolution brought in today from the employers' group read:

Resolved, that, without in any way limiting the right of a wage earner to refrain from joining any association or to deal directly with his employer as he chooses, the right of wage earners in private as distinguished from Government employment to organize in trade and labor unions, in shop industrial councils, or other lawful form of association, to bargain collectively, to be represented by representatives of their own choosing in negotiations and adjustments with employers in respect to wages, hours of labor, and other conditions of employment, is recognized, and the right of the employer to deal or not to deal with men or groups of men who are not his employes and chosen by and from among them is recognized, and no denial is intended of the right of an employer and his workers voluntarily to agree upon the form of their representative relations.

Dr. Charles W. Eliot asked Frederick P. Fish of the employers group if the last clause of the resolution meant that "the employer has a right not to deal or to deal with men, or groups of men, who are not his employes, and have not been chosen from among them."

"It means," replied Mr. Fish, "that while the employer has a perfect right to agree with his workmen that they shall be represented by anyone, and under those conditions to meet any representatives that they may choose, he also is not to be condemned if he refuses to meet representatives of his employes who are not chosen from among their own number. To make the matter specific, if an employer feels that it would be the destruction of his business if the representatives chosen by his men are not to be the representatives of his men at all, but the representatives of the labor union, he is not to be condemned if he refuses to meet that labor union acting as a representative of his employes."

As the situation stands, Mr. Woll's motion of a few days ago to adopt the public group resolution is the first order for Monday. Labor leaders said tonight that unless the Committee of Fifteen ought in a compromise which was acceptable to them they would insist that the original resolution be adopted. They were prepared, they said, to stand or fall on this issue.

The two principal speeches of the day were those by Mr. Gompers and Loren F. Loree of the employers' group. Mr. Gompers made a general plea for the rights of labor, and did not devote himself to the subject of collective bargaining except in a few sentences. Mr. Loree in his speech suggested Federal regulation of labor unions, and this evoked a reply from Mr. Gompers.

Says State Must Regulate Unions.

"I am not much concerned about the state of the world or of its future,' said Mr. Loree. "The world is a very old place. It seems to run along on lines that are fixed with reasonable definiteness and over which we have very little control.

"I am not concerned about the future of the United States. I know there are many people who seem to feel that there are four or five well organized groups of revolutionists supplied with money from a source that when it is discussed, I fancy, will surprise us all—but the Government of the United States is not anchored in the person of one with five ministers. The Government of the United States rests in the heart of every American.

"If I live out my span of life, what remains to me can be accounted on the fingers of my hand. To count them as of very little value as against the services that my great grandfather rendered in establishing the freedom of this country, or that my boys rendered when the offered their young lives in the service of the country in France, do not care for the future of the United States. What I think may happen is that when the reaction comes, the punishment that will be meted out to the people who threaten its existence will be so terrible as to form an example that will last throughout the ages."

"It seems to me the time has come when the State must, for its own protection and for the protection of the community, extend the same measure of regulation to these trade union organizations that it now extends to the corporation itself. It must have the same access to their books, to their letters, to their accounts, that it has to the letters, the accounts, and the books of the corporation. It must undertake to see that the right of the individual member is safeguarded; that his vote is expressed in a secret ballot, and that honesty of the count of that ballot is assured.

"I am in hope that before we adjourn one of the things that I think beclouds this whole discussion will be cleared up, and that is the place of management in the industrial organization. Suppose the 300,000 or 400,000 managements in this country should organize into a secret, oath-bound society, with a ritual based on the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and come to an agreement with these gentlemen in the trade unions to pass the expense on to the public? I do not know whether the public realizes it or not, but the only force standing between them and protecting them in the prices of goods is that unorganized force of managers."

About 10 per cent. of those engaged in gainful occupations in this country were organized in trade unions, and from 45 to 50 per cent. were organized in trade unions in Great Britain, asserted Mr. Loree.

"But I think we cannot overlook the fact that the Premier of Great Britain was compelled to say publicly, within the last two weeks, that England was determined to remain the master of her own house and we face the possibility of somebody having to say that in this country."

Near the close of his speech he asked if the public groups resolution should not read:

"The right of the policemen in the city of Boston to organize and trade in labor unions to bargain collectively to be represented by representatives of their own choosing in negotiations, &c., is not denied."

Gompers Replies to Loree.

Mr. Gompers derided Mr. Loree's characterization of the strength of the labor unions. He said that although labor leaders received salaries, they could earn much more in other lines. He said of Mr. Loree:

"I am not questioning his sympathy or interest, but somehow I cannot always follow him in his trend of thought and expression, and I suppose he is quite as proud of that as I am."

Mr. Gompers drew the conclusion that Mr. Loree had reflected upon labor as disloyal, and the President of the Federation made a long and impassioned defense of the laboring man. Later, Mr. Loree explained that he had intended no such idea.

"There is not one right," said Mr. Gompers, "which we claim we want to secure for ourselves and deny any other human being in America. There is not one improvement that we can bring into the life of the workers organized in America in which will have its reflex and influence upon every unorganized worker. We cannot prevent a reduction or check the imposition of an inferior condition upon the organized workers of America without at the same time checking that same or a worse imposition upon the unorganized. There is not a law that we can ask from the United States, there is not a law that we can ask from any of the States, or from any of our municipalities, for the protection and promotion of the rights and interests of organized workers that will not apply equally to unorganized workers. Yes, we speak in the name of labor, organized and unorganized. We speak for labor, the inarticulate, the powerless, the timid, the dominated worker, under duress; we protest that we speak in his name.

"Mr. Loree spoke and I understand he spoke the sentiment of quite a number of employers and others. They say the unions must be regulated, the same as all other combinations and corporations, and they must give an accounting; they must be responsible as other organizations are. Now the term, 'the struggle between capital and labor' is implied in the statement which I have just mentioned. The struggle between capital and labor. What is capital?

"Capital consists of tables—these tables and these chairs, these chandeliers, steel, clothing, boots, shoes, pork, hides and cattle, machinery, wool, sugar, oil—anything that can be brought to your mind relative to those things that I have mentioned is encompassed in the term 'capital'—dead things, inanimate things, material things, things which can be sold and bought, things which are subject to barter and sale; capital invested for the production of still more capital, more inanimate things, material things.

"And what is labor? Labor is the men and the women, erroneously and intentionally coined in the terminology as labor. It is laborers, workers, human beings, men and women and children.

"When it comes to the question of determining what is of greater importance as to men and women and little children, and dollars and things, the soul of mankind goes out to men and women and children, rather than to capital.

"Why this anxiousness to have the unions of labor incorporated? So that the same condition of affairs might be established as in the old times, under the guilds, when the Government stepped in and robbed the workers of the funds that they had accumulated to serve them for illness, for death, for the burial of the wife and the child as it might occur?"

Mr. Gompers said there were 4,000,000 members of the American Federation of Labor and 500,000 men in the four railway brotherhoods. These 4,500,000 men, said he, if they had the average family of five, would represent 23,000,000 or 24,000,000 persons in the United States.

"Whether you like it or not," he ended, "the men of labor in America have found the ability to articulate."

UPHOLD STEEL CORPORATION

Hardware Manufacturers Commend Gary's Stand in the Strike.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 17.—The American Hardware Manufacturers' Association today approved the stand of the United States Steel Corporation in its attitude toward the strikers. The organization represents more than 90 per cent. of the trade.

A resolution, adopted at the closing session of the convention this afternoon, commended the refusal of the Steel Corporation to deal with "labor agitators," and also indorsed the "twelve points" of the industrial conference now in session in Washington. A communication forwarded to Judge Elbert H. Gary read in part:

"It is the sense of this association that the employer in this instance appears to be not only justified in, but should be commended on account of the position assumed against the demands made by professional labor agitators and so-called representatives of labor to the end that what we believe to be a great majority of the honest, loyal and capable employes, (whom we understand are not in sympathy with the agitation which has forced this issue,) may be permitted to continue unmolested the present mutually satisfactory working conditions and relations with the industry, in which so many of them enjoyed a financial or stockholding interest."

Frank H. Payne of Greenfield, Mass., was elected President of the association. Robert H. Demain of Ithaca, was re-elected President of the National Hardware Association, comprising the jobbers.

CLEVELAND STRIKERS SHOT.

Two Are Wounded, One Perhaps Fatally—Machine Gun Blamed.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 17.—Two steel strikers were shot, one perhaps fatally, near the Cuyahoga coke plant of the American Steel and Wire Company tonight when they attempted, it is alleged, to intercept employes going into the plant.

Ray Atkinson was shot in the back of the head and in the face, and Charles Lutkus was wounded in the leg by a stray bullet. It is said Atkinson may die. Both were doing picket duty. Two other strikers told the police that Atkinson and Lutkus were shot by a machine gun from within the coke works.

Announcement was made tonight by William P. Palmer, President of the American Steel and Wire Company, that the company's nine plants would resume operations Monday morning. Plans also are being made by Otis & Co. to resume operations Monday, it was said.

Union officials were firm in their belief that none of the strikers would return.

REMARKABLE CELEBRATION.

STEEL STRIKERS ASK INJUNCTION

THREATEN DAMAGE SUITS

Sheriff Haddock Tells Strikers' Counsel He Faces Penalty for Unlawful Practice of Law.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 17.—A petition for an injunction to restrain the city of Pittsburgh from interfering with strikers' meetings was filed before Judge Ford of the Common Pleas Court this afternoon by W. B. Rubin, attorney for the steel strikers. Another petition is being prepared for submission to the courts tomorrow asking that the city of Pittsburgh be enjoined from interfering with regular meetings of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers where the organization is attempting to initiate new members.

The suit filed against the city today was in the name of J. L. Beaghen, one of the American Federation of Labor organizers, to whom permission to hold meetings was refused. The defendants are Mayor Babcock, Charles B. Pritchard, Superintendent of the Department of Public Safety; R. K. Alderdice, Superintendent of Police, and Peter P. Walsh, Police Inspector. A hearing on the petition will be held next Thursday. In the meantime the police will continue to prohibit meetings of the strikers.

The petition charges that the defendants are guilty of conspiracy and illegal acts through their interference with the American Federation of Labor organizers' attempts to hold meetings. It was announced by Mr. Rubin that additional suits will be filed against authorities of several other municipalities and against county officials and certain corporations. It was also asserted that damage suits will be filed against corporations and public officials for alleged false arrests of strikers, assaults, and unlawful search of houses.

A letter, in part as follows, was sent by Sheriff Haddock to Mr. Rubin this morning:

"All but a mere handful of Allegheny County's more than one million inhabitants welcome the day when Messrs. Rubin, Foster, Fitzpatrick and company conclude they have reaped their harvest here and move on. When the workingman thoroughly understands that out of the initiation fee $1 or every $3 it costs to join your anti-American movement belongs to Foster and those who are associated with him, and that close hope to accumulate not less than $500,000 in this manner, your self-assumed task will be at end.

"You are demanding license for privileges which you well know you are not entitled to, and while asserting uprightness you are in this county holding yourself out not less than attorney at law, counseling and advising in matters of law without being a member of the bar of Allegheny County. This act, if you know any law, you must know carries with it a penalty of $500 fine and one year's imprisonment.

UNION PRESSMEN SEEK WAY TO END THE STRIKE

Executives' Association Calls Conference with Employers for Monday.

While 250 members of the Printers' Section of the Association of Employing Printers yesterday reaffirmed their intention not to do business "until it is done with sane and reliable persons" and the Board of Directors of the Audit Bureau of Circulations was recommending to advertisers of the country that "they pledge their unwavering support to those publishers who are resisting the unreasonable demands involved in the present labor controversy in the printing trades of New York City," the members of the Press Room Executives' Association decided yesterday to try to bring about a settlement of the controversy on Monday.

The Printers' League held a three-hour session yesterday at the Hotel Astor at which the topic of discussion was the present tie-up in their industry. In the absence of William Green, the Chairman, who is in Chicago, Floyd E. Wilder presided. Besides repudiating the leadership of the pressmen in New York, it was stated that reports had been received from the International Executives that the secessionists were returning to the fold, while no splits were reported in the ranks of the employers.

Publishers Appeal to Advertisers.

The resolutions of the Audit Bureau of Circulations, which are signed by L. B. Jones, President, and Stanley Clague, Managing Director, were issued yesterday by John Adams Thayer at the offices of the Periodical Publishers' Association, 200 Fifth Avenue. They are:

Resolved, That the Audit Bureau of Circulations, composed of more than 1,300 leading publishers of newspapers, farm papers, business papers, and magazines, national advertisers and advertising agents, who represent 5,463 advertisers of the United States and Canada, recommends to the advertisers of the country that they pledge their unwavering support to those publishers who are resisting the unreasonable demands involved in the present labor controversy in the printing trades of New York City; and it is further

Recommended, That any lost insertions of advertisements due to delay or omission of issues by the publications affected be reinstated in equivalent measure at the earliest practicable date.

The Press Executives' Association, which was organized two weeks ago, will meet at Cavanagh's restaurant, 258 West Twenty-third Street, at noon on Monday in an attempt to have an armistice declared between the workers and the employers. The Executive Committee has sent out an appeal to every press room executive who holds a union card to be present. In the appeal attention is called to the fact that the executives must act quickly, as the controversy is driving publications and printing out of the city. A hope is expressed by the leaders in the movement that a settlement will be effected between the seceding pressmen's and feeders' unions and the employing printers. The meeting, it is announced, is the result of hearings with Barney Nolan, President of Franklin Union No. 51; George L. Berry, International President of the Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union, and Chairman William Green and several other members of the Printing League Section of the Association of Employing Printers.

"Vacationist" Printers Denounced.

Marsden G. Scott, President of the International Typographical Union, issued a long statement last night, in which he reiterated the stand that the members of "Big Six" must arbitrate the question of both hours and wages. He also stated that "the suggestion that the officers of the International Union should invite themselves to participate in conferences influenced or controlled by the Bagleys and Nolans in the trade union movement is superfluous."

"There is no intention on our part," he added, "to participate in any conferences with individuals whose obligation to their fellow men apparently were taken on the twisted bones of a dog's hind leg."

With reference to the action of the members of "Big Six" in taking vacations, Mr. Scott said:

"The Executive Committee, after listening to the report of President Rouse on the present controversy between No. 6 and the employing book and job printers, in which the members of the union have peremptorily quit their jobs without sanction of the officers, recommends that the union, in meeting assembled, disavow the action of those members herein referred to and order said members to return to work in their respective chapels.

"The adoption of the above order by Typographical Union No. 6 and the failure of the 'vacationists' to return to work can be construed in but one of two ways—either the order was not presented and indorsed by the union in good faith or the members of the organization are participating in a revolt against themselves. In either case 'Big Six' has emulated the example of the stupid ostrich which hides its head in the sand.

"No courageous man will hesitate to lead his followers to battle in a just cause. The conclusion is inevitable that the responsibility for the acts of the 'vacationists' does not rest squarely upon their shoulders. Officially, and as a matter of official record, the 'vacationists' have been made the goats for the recriminations which will haunt the members of 'Big Six' for many years to come."

Mr. Scott concluded his statement with an appeal to unionists to stand by the New York employers. "The decent American trades unionists," he said, "will owe an everlasting debt of gratitude to the New York employers and periodical publishers if they continue to stand firm in this struggle. The preservation of the right of the members of unions to make collective bargains and the right of the employers to demand the obligations of labor contracts shall be observed, are in the balance. Honorable trades unionism and the square deal are standing at the Marne. The leaders of the radical hordes have prepared for months for this assault on the International union, whose officers have no thought of giving ground, compromising or deserting the principles of conciliation and fair arbitration. The Huns and Bolsheviki of the trades union movement are at the gates. They shall not pass."

When Leon H. Rouse, President of Big Six, who was present at last night's meeting, was shown a copy of the statement issued by President Scott of the International Typographical Union, yesterday, he expressed the hope that every word of it would be printed. "I don't care to stoop to the level of the gutter by answering it," he said.

LONG ISLAND DRIVERS OUT.

Express Service Paralyzed by Strike in Flushing and Jamaica.

The strike of the expressmen spread yesterday to Long Island, 150 drivers having gone out at Jamaica and Flushing. This virtually ties up the whole of Long Island, as Jamaica is the chief distributing point for that entire section.

Martin Lacey, Secretary and Treasurer of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, with headquarters at 701 Eighth Avenue, yesterday sent a telegram to Director General Walker D. Hines, in Washington, and Governor Smith, advising them of the action of the striking teamsters, chauffeurs, and helpers on the Long Island Railway Express in voting at Cooper Union Thursday not to return to work. No reply had been received from either at a late hour last night.

Robert E. M. Cowie, Vice President of the American Railway Express, had no comment to make yesterday on the strike situation, declaring that it was all up to Washington.

PIERMEN TIGHTEN GRIP ON SHIPPING

International Mercantile Marine at 11 Broadway was utilized yesterday morning to help handle the mail and baggage aboard the Adriatic at Pier 60 at the foot of Nineteenth Street, North River.

Similar discouraging reports came from Brooklyn. Work was being done at three of the seven piers of the Bush Terminal, and also at the Norwegian-American Line at Thirtieth Street. A number of longshoremen returned to work in the Greenpoint section, unloading the steamers City of Birmingham and Ariosto, and gangs also went to work loading the steamers Lake Lessa and Lake Fraichar at the docks of the American Sugar Refining Company.

Reports from Staten Island and Jersey City were to the effect that no longshoremen were at work yesterday. On Staten Island police and private detectives were on guard protecting the docks. Twenty ships are affected at Staten Island.

Shipping at a Standstill.

A. R. Richardson, Federal Manager of Coastwise Ships, said that sixteen ships operated by the Southern Pacific Company, with which he is connected, are tied up with no longshoremen at work. W. B. Pollock, Marine Superintendent of the United States Railroad Administration, declared yesterday that the strike was as much on as ever and that the embargo on transatlantic shipping through the Port of New York is still in force and would not be lifted until a settlement appeared nearer than at present. At the office of the International Mercantile Marine it was said that thirty-three heavy cargo ships are lying idle, some at wharves and others at anchor. No longshoremen, it was said, have yet showed up for work at the piers of the company. A. R. Rooney, President of the Porto Rico Steamship Company and Chairman of the Wage Committee of the American Steamship Association, reported yesterday that none of the lines with which he is connected are doing any work at their piers.

Disguised as longshoremen, Detectives Devery, Gargin, McCambridge and Sweeney, of the Greenpoint Police Station, probably averted a clash between factions in the longshoremen's strike yesterday morning. One hundred men from Williamsburg and South Brooklyn, said by the police to be radicals and opposed to returning to work, gathered yesterday morning on Kent Avenue, between West Street and Franklin Street. It was alleged that they went there to get revenge for the shooting of Benjamin Brizzo, 30, at 308 East Thirty-ninth Street, Manhattan, and Nicholas Carcurito of 68 Eleventh Street, Brooklyn, on Thursday. Mixing freely with the crowd the detectives heard some of the men say they were armed. Thirty of the men were lined up against a wall by the detectives. Three had revolvers, and they were arraigned in the Bridge Plaza Court on a charge of violating the Sullivan law and held in $200 bail for hearing next Tuesday. They are Angelo Barbara, 36, of 38 Hope Street; Salvatore Tubilio, 28, of 257 North Eighth Street, and Frank Bantanilli, 45, of 22 Havemeyer Street. For disorderly conduct Michael Fazio, 39, of 536 Driggs Avenue, and Joseph DeNicola, 29, of 12 Havemeyer Street, were held in $200 bail.

Detectives McCambridge and Sweeney arrested William Jacobs, 26, of 151 Green Street, business agent of Local 955, on a charge of felonious assault, as the man who did the shooting Thursday. He confessed, according to the police, and said he had fired in self-defense. He was held in $1,500 for examination next Wednesday.

Two other arrests growing out of the strike were made in Brooklyn yesterday. William H. Chandler, 35, of 164 West 141st Street, Manhattan, a negro longshoreman, was charged with carrying a concealed weapon. The negro claimed that the revolver he carried was to protect himself against the I. W. W. Carmelo Molco, 30 years old, of 272 Christie Street, who had an I. W. W. membership card, according to the police, was arrested for threatening with a knife several longshoremen who were going to work.

Shipping Board Statement.

The following is the statement issued by the United States Shipping Board in Washington yesterday:

"The delay on the part of the longshoremen on the Atlantic Coast in abandoning their unauthorized strike in violation of their agreement to abide by the awards of the National Adjustment Commission makes it necessary for the United States Shipping Board to give immediate consideration to the working of the ships under its control.

"This delay is resulting in great inconvenience to the public in a serious interruption in the operation of the American marine, and in an appalling economic waste. This is a condition that cannot be permitted to continue and a remedy must be found at once to sustain these awards and carry on the business of the country."

Professor William Z. Ripley, Chairman of the Commission, announced yesterday that the Commission had awarded the bull stallers an increase of 10 cents an hour. They were receiving 80 cents an hour and demanded a flat wage of $10 a day and double time for overtime. The bull stallers are the men employed along the shore, who erect stalls for cattle and who also seal up broken grain bins.

Health Commissioner Copeland is watching the situation to prevent the decaying foodstuffs from becoming a menace to public health. He has instructed his inspectors to keep constant watch and report to him when they consider conditions represented a menace to health.

The Board of Directors of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation yesterday afternoon adopted a resolution declaring "that the peace and order necessary to the normal functioning of commercial life do not now exist" and offered the services of the organizations to the municipal, State and Federal Governments in the existing emergency. The resolutions were adopted following a report by Charles L. Bernheimer, Chairman of the Conference Committee which was appointed on Tuesday to study the situation brought about by the longshoremen's strike. The board went on record as unalterably opposed to the "closed shop" and condemned in the strongest terms the present radical activities of labor organizations.

he measured up and lived up to American ideals, and that is the test.

"He believed in one flag, and that is the flag that our men have carried in this war, and our country has carried in every war since the Revolution. He stated openly that there was no room in this country for the red flag—and let me say that there is no room in this country for the red flag. It is against everything which this Government stands for—the home, the town, the Nation, public morality, private well-being, the security of our institutions—everything that we hold most dear.

"Kill it as you would kill a rattlesnake, and smash those who follow it, speak for it or support it. They are enemies of the State and dangerous enemies. The time has come for frank talking. We have had events recently in this country which indicate the need of frank and direct action against those who talk treason.

"If Roosevelt were here now, I know he would feel the same keen interest that we do in the great issues of the day. The war is over, but problems after the war are confronting us, and they are rather large, and some of them are rather serious.

"We want to bring to the solution of those problems the same kind of enthusiasm, the same effort that we have brought to the conduct of the war. We want to do all we can, first, toward Americanizing the newcomers. We have been doing our work very superficially thus far. Marching in the street parade and carrying banners while the national air is being played is not Americanization."

Urges Women to Vote for Right.

General Wood appealed to the women in the audience, now that they had the vote, to realize the things they had dreamed of and longed for.

"In addition to voting yourselves," he said, "make your own men vote. For the attacks upon our institutions today are made possible by the fact that the reputable citizen does not vote to anything like the extent he should, whereas the organized element of disorder votes always, and as often as possible.

"We want the American people interested in the questions of the hour, and unless you vote, unless you do your full duty, we shall not be able to solve them. It is no light and trifling matter. It is very serious. We are going to maintain a government of this country by Americans under the Constitution, and we are going to live under a condition of law and order.

"We want to pay attention to our public schools. The teaching force throughout the country today is frightfully underpaid. The average country teacher receives less pay than the average chauffeur. Your professors and assistant professors are not receiving money enough to live upon. They are wanting, in the language, less than a highly skilled workman—the assistant professors and instructors less than many an unskilled workman.

"These men and women are those who are engaged in that silent battle against ignorance and prejudice, upon the success of which depends the stability of our institutions. And you cannot trifle any longer with that situation. It is dangerous.

"The war took out of college and the upper schools many skilled minds, both men and women. They showed how much capacity that many are not going back to their old work. They can get four or five times as much elsewhere.

"We want in the teaching profession the very best minds and the very best morals in this country, and to get them you have to pay them. The teaching profession is building the character of our children. It is exercising an influence perhaps even greater than that of the Church, for they have the children with them constantly for long periods of time.

"We do not want these men and women who, in a way, are building our ship of State—we do not want them to feel that they are neither appreciated nor properly paid. It is a dangerous thing to have discontented workmen doing this kind of work. We want to put education upon a pedestal. It is the foundation of this Republic, and if our educational institutions are not in the hands of the best men and the best women, it is going to be a very dangerous thing for us and for the country.

Pleads for One Language.

"Theodore Roosevelt was an ardent advocate of sound teaching and believed that those who teach should be properly compensated. You know his ideas about language, that there should be but one language in our public schools, and that language the language of the Declaration of Independence. As he put it one day, "I do not want America to become a polyglot boarding house."

"Denied an opportunity to lead troops in war, Roosevelt turned every energy he possessed to an active support of the Government, to push forward the conduct of the war. His sons went with his blessing; all about him did the best they could to help the Government. There was no petty holding back on his part. He stood boldly and counseled the wiping out of all party lines during the war, and you know how completely they were wiped out. The parties stood shoulder to shoulder and gave equal support to the Government in its great struggle to carry on the war to a successful ending.

"He stood for the fair deal; the 'square deal,' as he called it—the square deal for every one—the square deal for labor. He believed that labor had the right to organize. He did not believe labor had the right to drive out of the works those who did not see fit to organize. He believed we should turn our interest and our active sympathy into an investigation of the surroundings of labor, that we should do all we could to give them better housing to see that they had not only a living wage, but a wage which would enable them to put aside something for the stormy day.

"He believed in making labor a partner, in a way, in business. In other words, he urged that they become property owners, property holders, to the greatest possible extent.

Favored "Square Deal" for Labor.

"He appreciated the difficulties with which they were surrounded. But you remember his statement about the autocracy of labor. He coupled it with one concerning the autocracy of wealth—that in this country we will have no autocracy of wealth, nor will we have any autocracy of labor, but we want a real democracy of both. We want in civil life to keep up the democracy which we had in the ranks, where rich and poor, newcomer and native born, Jew and Gentile, Protestant and Catholic, stood together, filled with a common impulse, common purpose, and that purpose to serve our country in the war.

"He wanted, and we all want, that kind of a democracy in civil life. We want to stand shoulder to shoulder in these days—wipe out all the cheap distinctions, remember only the national interest and the welfare of all our people, and not have any particular class.

"Theodore Roosevelt believed in bringing into the study of labor and capital the golden rule. In other words, bring this element of human sympathy, the human element, into all of our relations, and I know how earnestly he wished that the great organizations which have done such splendid work during the war might keep up their organization and turn their energies into a study of our social and our economic and our domestic questions.

"One year of good hard work, work of the kind you have been giving to the war, would pretty nearly wipe out many of these conditions which are now rather threatening us.

"Roosevelt looked upon labor with broad human sympathy, believing that we should deal with labor questions by application of the Golden Rule, believing in publicity, pitiless publicity, and realizing that a democracy smothering publicity, resenting criticism, is a democracy in danger, if not a democracy dying.

"One might run on almost indefinitely going over the good things, the sound things, he stood for, and the brave things he did. We all know a great leader has been taken away from us, but we must remember one thing—that the spirit of this man for all time will march in the advance of our armies, and may his wise counsel and his wise words guide us and be heeded through all our national life.

"There is nothing more. He has been a very remarkable character—quite unlike any other man that has ever lived among us, and he has left us a legacy which will be of priceless value. We want to carry it on. We want to keep alive the things he stood for through the Foundation. We want to stimulate the youth of the country through the establishment of this home, and we want you all to come in and help in this movement.

"In doing so, you will be doing a great public service and you will be honoring and aiding in perpetuating the memory of one who was a model citizen, a Christian gentleman, a man humble because of his faith and his wisdom, Theodore Roosevelt."

Mrs. Wood was among those on the platform with her husband. She is the Honorary President of the Women's Roosevelt Memorial Association.

WOOD SEES DANGER IN 'INTERNATIONALISM'

Special to The New York Times.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Oct. 17.—"Hold up Americanism; avoid internationalism as you avoid death," said Major Gen. Leonard Wood in a speech at the Williams College victory celebration, which took place this morning. Americanism and law and order were the ideals he set up—not an Americanism, he said, which would avoid international helpfulness, but an Americanism with a national conscience, a national spirit which in another crisis would send an army to war even more quickly than this time.

"Law and order must stand steady. Keep your feet on the ground and your eyes on God.' Cling fast to your ideals; support the Constitution and those principles by which our country has been made. Support the authorities; avoid criticism as much as possible." These were the guiding principles laid down by General Wood.

The celebration was arranged by the alumni of Williams College to honor the 1,770 Williams men, constituting nearly 40 per cent. of living alumni and undergraduates and over 60 per cent. of all those graduated since 1900.

Professor Bliss Perry of the class of 1881 delivered an address, and then General Wood spoke to the assembly.

General Wood presented medals personally to the 150 or more of the alumni and sometime members of the college who were present at the exercises.

PREPARING TO DEPORT SEVEN GARY RADICALS

Arrested Men, Taken to Chicago, Are Known Bolsheviki—Three More Are to Go.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—Charged with "participating in a movement to overthrow the Government of the United States" seven radicals arrested by the military authorities in Gary were brought here today by immigration officers, and will be deported as soon as the legal formalities can be complied with. The seven are Russians and Austrians.

"This is merely a beginning of the drive to get objectionable aliens out of the country," said Colonel Mapes, commanding the Gary troops. "We have nothing to do with the strike, one way or the other, other than to preserve order. These men's activities were directed among the alien civilian population, unionists and non-unionists alike. They are being deported on their own statements, the statements of their friends, and on evidence obtained from them in the way of literature showing they were in the movement against the organized Government."

Three other men are still held pending further investigation, when more immigration officials will go to Gary. Four more raids were made during the day and one man taken into custody.

Paul Glazer, attorney for the strikers, admitted that the men brought to Chicago were active in the strike and also Bolsheviki, but characterized them as "very harmless."

D. Economoff, who is contesting Glazer's leadership of the foreign element in Gary, predicted that the Communist Party would oust the Socialist Party and that the I. W. W. would worm its way into the American Federation of Labor.

Persistent rumors were circulated in Chicago and Gary today that Monday would see the end of the strike. An official of one of the companies declared the effectiveness of the strike was broken in Gary.

An injunction restraining strikers from picketing the South Chicago area was issued by Judge Finckney of the Circuit Court at the request of Attorney Jacob Newman, who appeared for the Interstate Steel and Iron Corporation. T. J. Vind

D'ANNUNZIO TALKS OF MARCH ON ROME

"If Nobody Will Attack Me," He Says, "I Will Throw Myself on Nearest Enemy."

COUNTS ON SAILORS' PLEDGE

They Have Promised, He Says, to Fill Fiume Harbor with Ships at His Word.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

FIUME, Oct. 15.—"I believe I will act soon," said Gabriele D'Annunzio, receiving me today in his headquarters in the Governor's Palace, which towers above the little white Adriatic city. "If nobody will attack me—and I am ready to fight any aggression—I will march on Rome, or I will throw myself against the nearest enemy with my comrades. We want to offer ourselves in sacrifice. We want to light a fire that will burn high. It will awake in a portentous flame the deceived hopes of oppressed peoples, and no power of arms and money will be able to put it out.

"If they have guns, I have guns. I have men who can sink ships [Captain Rizzo, who sank the Austrian dreadnought Viribus Unitis,] and we have airplanes. We cannot be beaten because death is our victory.

"However, I do not see who can fight us. I do not believe the British will wreck their love for Italy and their respect for Latin civilization on the hard shores of the Quarnaro.

"Italian soldiers are ready to rally at a sign from me under the flag of Fiume. I will tell you something that happened yesterday. Captain Giulietti, Chairman of the Italian Federation of Seamen, was sent here by the Government to negotiate the restitution of the ship Persia, brought to Fiume by the Arditi with arms and food. We shall send it back empty, but Giulietti has sworn to me that any Italian ship we require will put to sea or be turned from her course and will make for Fiume. By his word I have the assurance of the Italian seamen that all the ships they man can be assembled at a given moment in this port as by enchantment. This shows how powerless is the Government against the will and feeling of a whole people, and the support of the workmen of the sea will make people abroad understand how far we are from being dictators and militarists.

"I firmly trust we can conciliate under Italian suzerainty all the commercial interests concerned. Fiume must be a free port because this is required by the interests of its hinterland and its own interest. Representatives in Fiume of Croatian and international industry, trade, and finance met yesterday and signed a document already forwarded by me to the Peace Conference, stating that the only possible solution of the Fiume problem from an economic point of view is to make it a free port under Italian suzerainty. We do not shrink from international pledges in this sense, covering all interests and all events in war and peace.

"The only thing we cannot bear is that the Italian character of the town should be denied and Italian national rights be abated. Let those abroad who do not know what our faith is, imagine how high-pitched sentiment can be in the righteousness of a cause and the determination of a man."

I put no question to the poet, I hardly interrupted his talk, when his quiet voice—he speaks now with some difficulty—seemed to fail and his only eye, weakened by the wound which destroyed the other, showed a desire for a momentary rest.

He looks far from excited, and his plans of action seem not unreasonable, except in so far as his readiness for sacrifice might draw him into hasty and costly deeds. His weakest point is probably his isolation from the outer world and his difficulty in appreciating the bearings of actual events on the factors of world politics.

The Persia to which d'Annunzio refers in the foregoing interview was carrying arms and ammunition to Kolchak's all-Russian army when her crew mutinied and insisted on taking her into Fiume.

Poet's Manifesto to Serbians.

FIUME, Oct. 16, (Associated Press.)—Gabriele d'Annunzio has issued a manifesto to the Serbians expressing the need of their recognition of a community of interest between Italy and Serbia.

"There exist no obstacles to a harmonious peace," he says. "Fiume wishes to be Italian. Freedom of commerce in the Adriatic will not be prohibited to you, but will be enlarged for your benefit. The only obstacle now is political intrigue and foreign gold. Now they seek war against Italy by collecting forces in the neighborhood of Fiume to occupy the city, the citizens of which with volunteers, will defend it unto death and destruction."

SEE AUSTRIAN COLLAPSE WITHOUT ENTENTE AID

Peace Conference Observers Are Alarmed by the Fall of the Krone to One Cent.

VIENNA, Oct. 17., (Associated Press.)—For the fiscal year ended Oct. 1 the Government spent 8,441,000,000 kronen, while its total income was 3,444,000,000. The deficit has virtually been met by printing money, with the result that the krone today is selling for one cent American money.

PARIS, Oct. 17, (Associated Press.)—Reports reaching the Peace Conference from Vienna indicate a distressing financial situation there. The consequent lack of food and fuel, which is threatening the existence of the Government, is causing much uneasiness in Paris.

One American dollar now brings 97 Austrian kronen in Vienna, which is a 40 per cent. drop in exchange in thirty days, placing the value of the krone, which normally is worth nearly 20 American cents, at 1 cent. The equivalent of an American dollar in kronen is required to buy a single loaf of bread in Vienna.

Bread is difficult to obtain, as all Austria is receiving only half enough food to provide the minimum rations of 200 grams daily per person. This quantity is gradually falling, as exchange is so much better on the currency of surrounding countries that they are buying up Balkan breadstuffs.

In the opinion of many members of the Peace Conference, the Austrian Government cannot endure until another harvest unless the Entente makes loans and steadies the disastrous exchange situation. Under present conditions, with the power of the krone virtually nil and the temptation of the public to begin forcible seizures so great, disorders are feared by the Peace Conference, with a possible revival of Bolshevism in Central Europe.

MAYNARD BREAKS HIS OWN RECORD

plane went into a tail spin and crashed to earth. Nine other aviators and mechanics have been killed in connection with the race.

The story of how Lieutenant Maynard repaired his plane under difficulties was told in dispatches and official reports to the Contest Board at the American Flying Club. The heavy ship had landed in a stubble field and the ground was so soft that it was difficult to handle the craft. By the light of searchlights sent from Omaha by the army and bonfires built by farmers, he and his mechanician worked all night putting the motor from Captain Francis's wrecked plane into the De Haviland structure. Captain Francis assisted him.

Maynard's Request Denied.

Maynard asked the Air Service for permission to fly back to St. Paul, Neb., and requested that his actual flying time be computed from that point, exclusive of the time spent in repairing the plane. This request was denied.

At Rock Island, Ill., Maynard was acclaimed by 5,000 persons after flying 138 miles in 83 minutes. He was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. "Billy" Sunday at luncheon.

Four other aviators started their second trans-continental flight yesterday. Lieutenant H. W. Sheridan started from the Pacific, and Lieutenants Kiel, Queens, and Worthington started from Mineola.

CROWD WELCOMES MAYNARD.

3,000 Cheer Flier at Chicago and Trixie Flees in Fear.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 17.—Lieutenant Belvin W. Maynard, with Sergeant W. E. Kline and their German police dog Trixie riding in the rear cockpit, roared out of the Western mist this afternoon, and for the second time landed in Chicago. A great crowd, including civil and military dignitaries that had waited the "parson's" coming, cheered so loudly that "motor deaf" Trixie was afraid and ran away.

A week ago Lieutenant Maynard flew into Chicago with a new record—850 miles in 6 hours and 45 minutes—and landed in the dusk on Ashburn Field. There were mechanics and soldiers, one or two newspaper men, and a dinner awaiting him. But when he landed today there were 3,000 persons lining the edges of Grant Park, a battery of movie cameras, two batteries of newspaper photographers, Red Cross members, a flying Colonel, or two, Committees of Welcome from several loop clubs, and a squadron of mechanics.

Lieutenant Maynard is a modest man and was reluctant to discuss his trip.

"That Liberty motor that carried me across the country so fast gave up out of Omaha," he said. "The crank shaft cracked, but Sergeant Kline and a farmer went to the Martin bomber that was completely crashed, and took the motor. We were up all night installing that motor, and we started east just as the sun came up this morning.

"It is a mighty hard grind, but we're showing just what can be done in this flying business. I hoped to be in New York tonight, but that motor stopped me. Well, I'll have to travel to make Cleveland now. Good-bye."

And half an hour after he landed the flier took his ship away.

The official scoreboard gave Lieutenant Maynard's landing time as 1:59:57 P. M., and his departure at 2:31:21 P. M.

FOKKER REACHES PRESIDIO.

Five Forced Landings Delayed Hartney's German Plane.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 17.—With five forced landings and subsequent take-offs to his credit, Lieut. Col. H. E. Hartney, an American "ace," brought the first German Fokker across the continent today, landing at the Presidio at 1:48:46 P. M.

It was freely predicted before the race that the little Fokkers would not get far. Most of them did not, but Hartney's experienced no trouble except a shortage of fuel. The German-made propeller was badly chipped by the rain, but he discovered a spare one at Salt Lake City and replaced the weatherbeaten "prop."

Three of Colonel Hartney's five forced landings were caused by a shortage of fuel. His original tank would hold only twenty-seven gallons, so he added an auxiliary tank at Chicago. He landed each time in a field and found trouble at times in getting gasoline, but interested farmers usually would supply him without cost. Two whole days were lost because of storms when control commanders refused authority to proceed.

For the first time in his flying experience Colonel Hartney was able to detect ground odors while in the air. Cooking smells from the noon meal were temptingly detected while flying through Nebraska.

Lieutenant H. W. Sheridan left on the return trip to Mineola today at 3:22:19 P. M., The only entrant to get away on the return journey. Captain H. C. Drayton was unable to start because his observer, Lieutenant L. J. Sweeley, refused to go. In the parlance of the airman, Sweeley "got a hunch."

Other arrivals today, all of whom had been held by control commanders because of storms, included Lieutenant J. B. Wright at 11:44:25 A. M., Lieutenant H. H. George at 11:18:25 A. M., and Lieutenant Thomas V. Hynes at 11:41:17 A. M. None of the three will make the flight back.

MAYNARD AFTER NEW RECORD

Ordered to Make One-Stop Flight from Coast to Coast.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 17.—Lieutenant Maynard has received orders from the War Department to make a one-stop flight from Mineola, L. I., to San Diego, Cal., immediately upon completion of his present flight, he announced here tonight. Dallas, Texas, will be the only scheduled stop.

A De Haviland 4, equipped with a Liberty motor of the same type he is using now, will be used by Lieutenant Maynard. The flight would be made by himself, he said, with the observer's place removed to increase the capacity of gasoline to 300 gallons.

CROWELL APPEALS FOR AIR DEPARTMENT

Urges Federal Control of Commercial as Well as Military Aviation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Assistant Secretary of War Benedict C. Crowell, testifying today before the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, said that Great Britain, with "splendid foresight," was far and away ahead of the rest of the world in aviation development, and that if the United States was to play its proper part it should place the air resources of the country, commercial, military, and naval, under the direction of an independent department of the air.

Such a department, he added, should be coequal with the Departments of War, Navy, and Commerce. Today, said Mr. Crowell, Great Britain has air as well as military and naval attachés in all the great capitals of the world, while British agents are in South America and the Far East representing the air craft industries of England.

Mr. Crowell said that he regretted being compelled to take a stand in the present aviation controversy in opposition to the policy favored by Secretary Baker, General March, and others connected with the War Department. He was the head of a commission that went to Europe to investigate the aviation question, and returned to Washington a few weeks ago.

"The leaders of thought on the other side," said Mr. Crowell, "are agreed that aviation in future wars will have a function quite distinct from the present limitation of its activities as an auxiliary of the army and navy, which are observation, photography, and direction of fire.

"Marshal Foch, Field Marshal Haig, and Ludendorff, all agree that before the mobilization of armies can be effected in the next war, a great conflict will occur in the air. The aggressive nation will be prepared to launch an attack upon the shipping, munition manufacturing and storage centres, and even the cities of its opponents.

"With Europe only sixteen hours distant from us by air routes, we cannot rest in fancied safety or isolation. It is only through the agency of a responsible organization that we can confidently look for preparedness for such an eventuality."

The following activities would be cared for by the proposed Department of Aeronautics, as outlined by Mr. Crowell:

1. Aeronautic research and experimental work.

2. Supply of aircraft material for all governmental branches that use aircraft, this to include liason with the air industry that will permit the maintenance of plans for the mobilization of the industry in the event of war.

3. General training, namely, that kind of practical and theoretical aeronautical instruction which is common to all branches of the Government-employed air personnel.

4. Supervision of all matters relating to commercial aviation which require Federal guidance and encouragement.

The department would operate in four divisions, namely, the Technical, Supply, General Training, and Civil Aviation Divisions.

WARBURG STUDIES RELIEF.

Arrives in Holland from Germany, Where Brothers Visited Mother.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Oct. 17.—Felix Warburg, who has just returned from Germany, said he had been in Europe mainly on work connected with war relief. He has been visiting countries helped by such relief, being much interested in the work of reconstruction in those countries.

Felix and Paul Warburg also visited their mother in Hamburg.

Dutch Not Conferring with Germans

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17—The Netherlands Legation has received a cable from the Foreign office at the Hague, stating that the report that Dutch delegates to the International Labor Conference to be held in Washington were discussing details of the meeting with a representative of the German Government, is without foundation. There has been no intercourse whatsoever, the cablegram states, between the Netherlands delegation and representatives of the German Government. The report was contained in a London message quoting a Central News dispatch from Amsterdam.

LANSING URGES LEAGUE AS IT IS

Fears That Rejection Would Discourage Future Attempts for International Peace.

FOR CURB ON RADICALS

Tells Regents of State University That Demands for Special Rights Must Be Defeated.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Oct. 17.—Robert Lansing, Secretary of State, pleaded here tonight for a trial of the League of Nations in its present form, lest its rejection discourage future attempts among nations to act together for international peace. He voiced a solemn warning that America must defend herself against the danger of a democracy from within which he described as efforts of apostles of unrest to gain special privileges for certain groups and to deprive others of private rights inseparable from the American conception of individual liberty. He urged that the nation, remembering that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," rouse itself against these "apostles of unrest and even of revolution, lest it be recorded that we made 'the world safe for democracy' but that we failed to make 'America safe for democracy.'"

The Secretary spoke before the annual convocation of the Regents of New York University, who conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws, of whom there are but four other living holders—Cardinal Mercier, Thomas A. Edison, Elihu Root, and Ambassador Jusserand of France. He chose for his topic "The Power of Democracy" and devoted his introduction to a retrospect of American achievement in the war, which, he said, had proved "that this nation is at heart true to the loftiest conceptions of duty and that it only needed the occasion to demonstrate to a skeptical world that a great democracy was ready, eager—to make any sacrifice to protect its principles of political freedom from the destructive forces of military autocracy."

Later in his address Mr. Lansing elaborated his own faith in democracy, making plain that despite his plea for the League of Nations as an immediate instrument of international peace he was "firmly convinced that if every nation was a democracy in reality, as is this Republic, universal peace would be an accomplished fact and not a goal toward which the world looks with longing eyes, striving to devise metnods by which it may be attained."

Objections to the League covenant, the Secretary said, "were not to be wondered at, considering the complexity of the subject." He did not believe such a document ever could be drafted so as to win universal approval, and he thought "none of the objections over which so much oratory has been spilled bulks large, compared with the will and purpose of the nations expressed in the covenant."

"It is my unqualified judgment," the Secretary continued, "that the League of Nations should be fully tested in its present form before being condemned, if for no other reason than that to reject it would be to discourage future attempts to obtain unity of action among the nations in the effort to avoid international conflicts. We cannot as an influential power in the world assume such a responsibility.

"Admitting, for the sake of argument, all the faults and undesirable features which its bitterest opponents have raised against the covenant, I am prepared to say that it ought to be adopted and tried, for it represents today an international concert devoted to peace. The United States, I am convinced, will not be the nation to check this movement or to discourage the civilized States of the earth from seeking by united purpose and counsel to restrain the use of force in the settlement of their disputes. If after a fair trial the League fails to accomplish its objects, then is the time by amendment to make the covenant more efficient.

"Such action as that which was taken by the conference at Paris when it adopted the covenant makes for peace, but does not insure its permanency. It is a powerful agency, but not an all-powerful one. The only certainty of unbroken peace in this world, I believe, lies in the general adoption of democracy as the supreme political principle of all nations. Until that time comes we must use other agencies, but must not expect too much of them. Yet we should never lose sight of the real preventive or cease to advance the policy of democracy, of real democracy, among the nations."

Turning to his warning against allowing the triumph of radical propoganda, Mr. Lansing said:

"Today new problems have arisen to try the efficiency of democracy. Victors over autocracy, we have discredited the system of class based on birth and title, and we have now to meet a new classism, strongly though not as manifestly hostile to democracy and equality of individuals as the old classism. It is in foreign lands that this new enemy has most radically developed and openly attacked individual liberty.

"But this country is not free from the danger. Today the rights of particular classes over other classes of our population are being preached in our streets, and appeals to selfishness, to envy, and to ignorance, under the guise of justice, are being sent broadcast throughout the land.

"Apostles of unrest and even of revolution, as well as others less radical and more sincere, taking advantage of the industrial and commercial confusion resulting from the war, are seeking converts to doctrines which aim to grant special privileges to certain groups of citizens and to deprive others of those private rights which are inseparable from the American conception of individual liberty.

"We must not close our eyes to the progress of events and to the tendency of the forces which are being exerted. We must not rest in a state of indifference or false confidence. It is a time for action. Democracy is in danger, from within rather than from outside the body politic. Again we, Americans, are called to the defense of the American principle which is being attacked not only by insidious foes, but by friends who fail to see the wrong which they are doing. We must meet this new attack with the same unyielding and courageous spirit as that with which our soldiers met the Germans on the soil of France.

"I believe that realization of the present danger will again call forth the best there is in this Republic and we will succeed in overcoming those who seek to pervert democracy by injecting into it a species of class imperialism which is more attractive than the ancient forms because it appeals to those who have suffered in the past from injustice and from denial of that equality of opportunity which it is the duty of democracy to maintain.

"No truer declaration was ever uttered than 'Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty,' and the American people ought today to take that thought to heart and resist every movement which is out of accord with the liberty and equality of the citizens of this republic without distinction as to race, class, or condition. The dangers, as I see them, are a disposition to compromise the principle of equal rights with the demand for special rights; an apparent willingness to conciliate by concessions in order to avoid for the time being at least those evil conditions which threaten to result from the denial of class privileges; a timidity in meeting the issue squarely and boldly pointing out in what way it menaces the idea of democracy; and last, but by no means least, the tendency of many leaders of political thought to temporize with and placate certain elements of our population by accepting in a measure undemocratic doctrines which plainly violate the essential principle of the American political system.

"A great chapter of the history of the United States is being written in these days. It must not be recorded that we made 'the world safe for democracy' but that we failed to make 'America safe for democracy.'"

LETTS REFUSE ARMISTICE

RIGA, Oct. 15.—Soon after 1 o'clock today the allied fleet began firing on Dunamunde (an island and fort at the mouth of the Dvina.)

A car took an English officer and myself eight miles to the north, where we boarded a patrol boat for the eastern headland. The Lettish skipper and his crew were bubbling over with glee and delightedly pointed to where bullets had dented without penetrating the loose screen of iron plates built around the wheelhouse.

Climbing the ruins of a church battered by the Germans before the Brest-Litovsk peace we obtained a fine view of H. M. S. Cleopatra and her sister cruiser, the Dragon, lying in the harbor with the French destroyers Marne, Francis Garnier, and Aisne, and the English destroyers Windsor, Ariel, and Vanoc. Signalin was in progress on the ships by the code and on shore by star rockets.

The earliest phase of the bombardment had already taken place, and 500 Letts had gone across the Dvine and landed. Presently bright flashes broke from the ships' sides and one's ears throbbed with the roar and crash of naval gunnery. Wherever a shell fell, up went great black and yellow clouds, sometimes followed by uprising tongues and sheets of flame.

Leaving my companion up the tower, I walked to a cluster of cottages at the furthest point of land. Veteran Lettish fishermen and farmers, with women and children, were watching the bombardment with deep content. They stood in the shelter of the walls and two who spoke English described how their little homes had been assaulted day and night by the rifle and machine-gun fire of their foes across the river.

One old Lettish pilot, gazing intently at the opposite shore, gave vent to earnest jubilation when a certain wooden building vanished in a column of smoke. It seemed that this was the dwelling of a crafty German pilot who was held in general execration as a spy in the pay of the enemy.

Four destroyers, led by one of the Frenchmen, steamed slowly into the river and anchored abreast of us. Within the entrance they were soon delivering salvos against certain targets in German-occupied Dunamunde. The targets were chosen so carefully that I had no misgivings, for the thousand or so Lettish innabitants were sheltered in their cellars.

Returning this evening to Riga I found that meanwhile it had been subjected to heavy shelling. Companies of brave Letts have crossed the bridges and engaged the foe in desperate encounters.

Word has come from the Lettish commander on the Bolshevist front that some sixty miles east of Riga he had fallen in with a German patrol, of whom he took eighteen prisoners. Presumably, therefore, while a section of the Germans under Avaloff-Bermondt has attacked Riga, another section has moved straight from Mitau toward Red Russia.

Later.—I have just learned that following the allied bombardment Lettish troops landed at Dunamunde, and crossing from that island to the village of Bolderaa encountered a far superior force of Germans, whom they defeated, taking many prisoners, thanks to the daring leadership of the Lettish commander, Colonel Bolstine. The prisoners have been amazed to discover that they are not fighting the Bolsheviki.

Letts Reject Truce Proposal.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—The French and British missions in Letvia requested the Lettish Government to effect an armistice with the forces of Colonel Avaloff-Bermondt, according to private advices received here.

The advices say that the Lettish Government refused to entertain this proposal, pointing out that the Allies in July urged them to conclude an armistice with the German General von der Goltz, and undertook to effect a withdrawal of the German troops from Letvia, but that the Germans are still there and attacking.

According to the advices, the Lettish Government will refuse to enter into any porparlers with the Russians until they have compelled the Germans to evacuate Letvia.

BERLIN, Oct. 17, (Associated Press.)—The entire left bank of the Lower Dvina River is in the hands of the Russians under General Avaloff-Bermondt, says the Lokalnzeiger's Mitau correspondent.

"The Letts," the correspondent adds, "are attacking Thorensberg from the right and causing heavy damage. Avaloff-Bermondt is said to be sparing Riga. The left upper bank of the Dvina between Baasdon, Schoenberg, Friederichstadt and Jakobstadt is the scene of desultory, indecisive fighting between the Russian advance and the Lettish and Esthonian troops.

"Riga's population is in desperate straits."

REDS' RIGA VICTIMS 23,632.

Prof. Schneider Gives This Estimate —Girls Aided as Executioners.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 1, (Associated Press.)—Professor Guido Schneider of Riga, in a lecture here, stated that the Bolsheviki shot 23,632 men, women, and children in Riga.

The executioners, intoxicated and unable to aim straight, wounded their victims time and again, laughing at their agonies, which sometimes lasted a whole day and night. Professor Schneider said. Young girls, elegantly dressed, volunteered as executioners and, promenading up and down with rifles, fired at the prisoners.

ANTI-RED FORCES NOW IN PETROGRAD

ceived through Finnish channels, told of the capture by the anti-Bolshevist forces of the city of Gatchina, twenty-nine miles from Petrograd and an important point on the Petrograd to Berlin railroad. This report stated that when it was filed the fall of Petrograd was imminent.

The reported capture of the Russian capital by the army under General Judenitch is looked upon in Washington as perhaps marking the beginning of the triumph of the forces opposed to Bolshevism in Russia, in Europe as well as in Siberia.

Taken in connection with other factors it was stated that the various Russian forces which are now opposing the Bolsheviki are doubtless in the best position they have ever occupied. While the fall of Petrograd of itself might not be of the greatest military or strategic value, the moral effect of this loss would be great.

General Judenitch, commanding the Northwestern Russian Army, has notified J. C Miller, Rusian representative of the American Relief Administration European Children's Fund in New York, that he expected to capture Petrograd from the Bolsheviki in three or four days, according to a cable message dated Oct. 16 and received here yesterday from the London offices of the administration.

The administration has supplies sufficient to feed 650,000 persons for seventeen days at Viborg, Finland, a port not far from Petrograd, and these will be moved to the Russian capital for the relief of its population as soon as the city is taken by the anti-Bolshevist forces.

DENIKIN AND POLES TO JOIN.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—The latest authoritative news regarding the military situation in Southern Russia is that the army of General Denikin on the extreme left of the line has taken Chernigoff and is advancing northward along the east bank of the Dnieper River toward Gomel. (The right of the Polish Army, it was stated last week, rests on the Dnieper at Gomel, about seventy miles from Chernigoff, so that a junction of the two armies would be effective should Denikin reach Gomel.)

On the right flank the forces of General Denikin have crossed the Don on a 200-mile front. Everywhere the army is driving back the Bolsheviki.

In East Russia the Bolshevist forces are compelled to adopt purely defensive tactics owing to the great demands upon the Bolshevist effective elsewhere.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—An official dispatch from Omsk, dated Oct. 14, said that the whole of the North Siberian Army rested on the Tobol River and that the other two armies were an average of only five miles from the same river. On the Semiretche front Admiral Kolchak's forces have advanced, capturing 5,000 prisoners.

KOLCHAK EXPRESSES REGRET.

Deplores Flogging of American Soldier by Irresponsible Officers.

OMSK, Oct. 9, (Associated Press.)—The All-Russian Government has expressed to the United States its regret and indignation over the flogging of an American soldier, Corporal Benjamin Sperling, by General Kalmikoff's Cossacks, word of which reached here recently. The Government in its communication deplored the act as that of irresponsible officers who were taking advantage of the unrest in the Far East to avenge their personal grievances. The Government is awaiting a report from Minister of Justice Telberg, who is visiting Eastern Siberia and investigating the case, to determine what further steps may be necessary.

The movement of the troops of General Semegoff, another of the Cossack leaders, eastward into the territory of the Chinese Eastern Railway, was unauthorized, the Government states, and he has been ordered to retire.

FRENCH CRITICISE BRITISH.

Russian Reports Not Pleasing to Some Circles in Paris.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 17.—French opinion was rather startled this afternoon by a report [now denied] that the British had taken Kronstadt. On the one hand there was saisfacion expressed that the British were supporting Yudenitch, which it is hoped will obviate the necessity of support of the German-Russian army in the Baltic provinces. But other Frenchmen are wondering whether the British are not following a policy of being on the spot in the event of a Bolshevist collapse.

Another report which appears to have surprised the French is that the Bolsheviki captured a British heavy battery in the region of Kiev. It was known that the British had sent Denikin artillery, but it was not known that it was accompanied by gunners.

Diplomatic circles and the French press are greatly perplexed by the almost simultaneous publication of the threatening Allied note to Germany regarding von der Goltz and the polite note asking Germany to take part in a blockade of Soviet Russia.

A French authority explains: "The hare of military decision put forward by Marshal Foch has caught up with the tortoise of civilian cogitation, laboriously evolved by the Supreme Council." In other words, the note regarding the blockade, is the culmination of the Council's deliberations about a peaceful blockade of Russia, which they began as far back as last June. Meanwhile the von der Goltz affair suddenly became critical and under pressure from Foch the comminatory note on the subject was sent to Germany. Thus there is no reversal or contradiction of policy implied, but only a difference in the speed of putting thought into action.

SCANDAL INVOLVED IN MANGIN'S RECALL?

French Rhine Commander Said to Have Given Offense to Influential Criminals.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 17.—Although the Matin today prints a dispatch, recabled from an American newspaper, to the effect that General Mangin's recall is due to Premier Clemenceau's idea that the General's army is too much devoted to him, so that he is a possible danger to the republic—a suggestion, by the way, which is scouted in French military and political circles—another and more sinister explanation of the General's recall is being whispered in Paris.

A grave scandal recently came to light at Mainz regarding illicit sales to the Germans of army food supplies in which officers of the section économique of Mangin's army were implicated. It was announced a few days ago that several arrests of military men and civilians had been made, and Mangin is said to have declared that he would show no mercy to the culprits, whose profits in one transaction, involving twenty truckloads of bacon, are reported to have amounted to 500,000 francs.

It appears that several of those accused hold important business posts in civil life—indeed, it was on this account that they were selected—and no stone has been left unturned both in civil and military quarters to induce Mangin to permit the affair to be hushed up. The General, however, proved obdurate, and now it is suggested that the influence exerted was actually capable of bringing about his recall.

It remains to be seen whether the Government will be moved to offer an explanation, and whether the scandal in question will be ventilated or quietly dropped.

AZERBAIJAN REPORTED IN REVOLT FROM PERSIA

Population Is Largely Turkish and Enver Pasha Has Been Active There.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—Little surprise was expressed in well-informed circles here today at a newspaper report that the Persian Province of Azerbaijan had revolted, as a result of the Anglo-Persian agreement. Confirmation of the report of the revolt is lacking.

There has been much recently to prepare the experts for an announcement of trouble in this section of Persia. Not only have the extremists been bitterly agitating against the Anglo-Persian agreement, but there is said to have been much Bolshevist intrigue. The population of Azerbaijan is almost entirely Turkish, and in consequence Turkey laid claim to possession of the province. The possibilities of trouble there are said to have been long foreseen.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 17, (Associated Press.)—Enver Pasha, the Young Turkish leader, who fled from Constantinople to escape arrest and prosecution on the downfall of the Young Turk régime, and whose whereabouts it had been impossible to learn since, has lately been seen at Karabagh and Baku, in the Caucasus. The fallen leader avoided Americans who were visiting the oil regions.

The British, who have had forces at Baku for some time, were afraid, it was declared, to arrest him on the old charges of responsibility for the Armenian massacres during the war. Enver Pasha, having declared that he would never be taken alive.

One reason for his activities in the new republic of Azerbaijan, and also among the Tatars, is that he is thereby making himself a political power to be treated with, thereby insuring his own safety.

So far Enver Pasha has been disowned by Mustapha Kemal Pasha and the Nationalists.

SAYS RICH RADICALS FINANCE 'RED' PRESS

Samuel A. Berger Declares New York Parlor Socialists Furnish Propaganda Funds.

NO NAMES ARE MENTIONED

Holds That Bolshevist Literature for 3,000,000 Readers Is Directed by Americans.

The radical propaganda among foreigners in the industrial centres of this country, aiming at the overthrow of the American Government and a general seizure of property after the Bolshevist example, is carried on largely by well-to-do New Yorkers of the parlor radical type, whose contributions keep the "Red" press alive.

This is established, according to Deputy State Attorney General Samuel A. Berger, by his survey of the radical publications of this city, in connection with the investigation by the Lusk Committee into Bolshevist propaganda.

Between forty and fifty extreme radical publications which reach 3,000,000 readers, largely in the great industrial centres, are published in this city. Only two of these are self-supporting, and the rest are kept going by the subsidies of dilettante "Reds" of this city, including a number of well-known men and women, according to Mr. Berger. He said that a list of the contributors who kept the foreign-language revolutionary press from going out of existence had been furnished to the Federal Government.

"I examined the editors and publishers of all these papers," said Mr. Berger, "and have made a study of their books. With two exceptions, the editors or publishers have admitted to me that the income from their papers would not pay expenses and that they would be bankrupt except for gifts from wealthy people of this city.

"I have not the authority to make public the names of those who are subsidizing radical publications, but they are in general the same people who subsidized the pro-German propaganda and furnished the money for the pacifist and peace-at-any-price campaigns and contributed to the cause of the conscientious objectors. My inquiry shows that a very large portion of the circulation of these newspapers is in the very centres where, during the past few months, there has been the greatest amount of radical disturbance and radical labor agitation.

"The keynote is the overthrow of the present system of Government, the abolition of the wage system, and the dictatorship of the proletariat.

"This propaganda is carried on almost solely among foreigners. It makes little appeal to Americans or to foreigners who have become familiar with American institutions. Those who furnish the money and those who direct the propaganda are, however, mostly Americans.

"The Left Wing of the Socialist Party presents its 'program' as follows:

a. The organization of workmen's councils; the recognition of and propaganda for these mass organizations of the working class as instruments in the immediate struggle and as instruments for the seizure of the power of the State and the basis of the new proletariat State of the organized producers and the dictatorship of the proletariat.

b. Workers' control of industry to be exercised by the industrial organizations, or Soviets, as against Government ownership or the State control of industry.

c. Repudiation of all national debts.

d. Expropriation of banks.

e. Socialization of foreign trade.

Mr. Berger was asked if the Federal Government had made full use of its power to deal with the press preaching revolution. He refused to answer the question.

SENATE ASKS PALMER FOR DATA ON RADICALS

Passes Resolution Requesting What Action Has Been Taken Against Advocates of Revolution.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—The resolution introduced in the Senate last Tuesday, which calls upon Attorney General Palmer to advise and inform the Senate what action, if any, has been taken by the Department of Justice to proceed legally against domestic and alien radicals who are or have been advocating the overthrow of the United States Government, and also what legal steps have been taken for the deportation of alien agitators, was passed unanimously by the Senate today.

Senator Poindexter expressed the hope that Attorney General Palmer would respond with the information requested within a week. Senator Poindexter expects soon to make a speech in the Senate, in which he will review the activities of I. W. W. agitators, Bolsheviki, and other disturbers in this country.

In an interview Senator Poindexter said that he had been informed that all but eight of the sixty or more alien agitators who were ordered deported as a result of the effort to overthrow the Seattle municipal government last Spring, instead of being sent to Europe, received their liberty after reaching Ellis Island. One of these, Leon Green, whom he described as a "Russian anarchist and alien," now is active in agitation in the Chicago district, he said.

"No steps have been taken," added Senator Poindexter, "to deport this man. There can, if necessary, be introduced a cabinet full of documentary proof and an army of witnesses to prove the existence of a revolutionary movement in this country, and we will find that it is not confined to Gary, Indiana, nor to the State of Indiana, but that it extends throughout the United States. We will find that this movement is well supplied with funds and that a large number at least of the many strikes that have occurred during recent months and that are now in progress are based upon revolutionary purpose.

"A member of Congress from Ohio, who deserves a great deal of credit for the courageous stand which he has taken upon this question, a member of a labor union himself, told me the other day that recently one of the aliens working in the steel industry in Youngstown, Ohio, who had gone out on strike told him that they were on strike because Congress was going to take over these industries and give them to the workers.

"That is the idea behind the longshoremen's strike in New York. Confessedly or secretly they hold up food supplies which are stored upon these ships, which they refuse to unload because they want to put the community into discomfort.

"The demands which the longshoremen in New York are making if put into effect would give them and the Longshoremen's Union absolute control of the employment of men, their discharge, the fixing of their wages, and the fixing of their hours in that industry."

LLOYD GEORGE URGES OUR AID IN TURKEY

Turkey to the uncertainty as to the attitude of the United States. It was impossible, he said, to settle the destiny of Turkey before knowing whether the United States was going to share the burdens of civilization outside of the United States

In the course of his references to Turkey Lloyd George turned to American Ambassador Davis and said:

"I am glad that you are brought face to face with the American Ambassador. We are undertaking a great civilizing duty at great cost to our country. Providence has sent this mission to our race. We beg our kith and kin in America to join us in this task. Unless they do so, I do not know what will happen to parts of the Turkish Empire."

The Prime Minister, in a further reference to Turkey, said:

"The people of Turkey have been living in the shadow of a great tyranny for centuries. They are appealing to America for help. I hope that the appeal will not be in vain. Such a remark might sound impertinent from a British Minister but we are undertaking similar responsibilities ourselves and find that we are coming to the limit of our strength and that it is unwise for us to go further."

Lloyd George in dealing with the national expenditure said:

"We must not allow ourselves to be persuaded by stunthunters into the belief that the time is coming within a few years when expenditure will return to pre-war conditions."

The Premier said he thought that, perhaps, by doing more in order to save temporary expenditures, the Government might imperil greater and more permanent interests. He pointed out that the bread subsidy must soon disappear, adding that the railroad subsidy was merely a question of distribution and that the coal subsidy had gone already.

The students of Sheffield University caused a novel diversion for Lloyd George before he received the degree of Doctor of Laws from the university this forenoon. Eight of the students, attired in white smocks, surrounded him, placed him in a sedan chair swathed in the Union Jack, and carried him around the university grounds and the corridors of various buildings of the institution.

The procession was preceded by a ragtime band. Its progress awoke cheers from the enthusiastic crowd that witnessed it and patently caused great amusement to the Premier.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 17, (Associated Press.)—The possibility that Italy may be a candidate for the mandate over Turkey under the League of Nations is being considered in political and commercial circles here, particularly in view of the great efforts that the Italians are making to establish themselves in a banking and commercial way in Turkey.

Discussion of the subject is based large upon the supposed suitability of the Italians for living in the Turkish climate and the need which the Italians have for an outlet for their enterprises and for a "place in the sun."

OUR FORCE IN FRANCE NOW BELOW 15,000

Gen. Connor Says That Practically All Will Have Sailed Within a Month.

NO GERMANS TO GUARD NOW

With These Gone, Liquidating Supplies and Squaring Accounts Are the Chief Tasks.

PARIS, Oct. 17, (Associated Press.)—The actual number of American troops now in France is less than 15,000 and is rapidly diminishing, according to General W. D. Connor, commanding the American troops in France. He says that within a month practically all the soldiers will be gone, as the task of repatriating the German prisoners is now completed. Only four or five Germans now remain under the charge of the American forces, and these are ill in hospital. They will be sent home through Coblenz as soon as they can travel.

The work of completing the liquidation of army supplies, squaring accounts, and the policing of American Peace Conference headquarters are now the only tasks detaining the soldiers and officers in France, and General Connor said he expected that this work, too, would be ended within one month. All American supplies, including office fixtures and automobiles, are already the property of the French Government and are merely being used by the Americans until their task is completed.

Army officials are still working on the settlement of about 7,000 small claims arising from automobile accidents and damage by fire to houses in which Americans were billeted. Those not settled will soon be turned over in bulk to the French Government as a credit against the amount that France is to pay for the American supplies. The army commissary will soon close, since the supplies have all been sold to France, subject to the proviso that the American Army be supplied from them until it can close up its affairs.

The officers in Paris have no control whatever of the American forces in the occupied area of Germany, which are under the command of Maj. Gen. Henry T. Allen and are supplied independently of the Paris offices. Should American troops be sent to France en route to Upper Silesia to supervise the plebiscite there, General Connor will merely direct the movement of the troops across France, and they will pass out of his jurisdiction when they reach German territory.

On every side there are indications of the speedy termination of the work of the American army in France, and within three weeks probably the army automobiles used by the Peace Conference will be turned over to France, the American soldier orderlies will be withdrawn from the Hotel Crillon, and all activities of the American Government will be handled by civilian officials and employes.

OHIO REPUBLICANS BAR MRS. LONGWORTH

Refuse to Appoint Her to State Advisory Committee---Will Question Harding on Presidency.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 17.—Ohio Republicans created a sensation here today when they rejected Mrs. Alice Longworth Roosevelt, daughter of former President Roosevelt and wife of Representative Nicholas Longworth, as a member of the State Advisory Committee. They also took action to get United States Senator Warren G. Harding to say definitely and conclusively whether he is a candidate for President. The incidents occurred in a secret session, but the news leaked out tonight.

Mrs. Longworth's name was presented by a special committee along with that of Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton, leader of Ohio suffragists, who recently came out in a pronouncement in favor of a third women's party. The name of Mrs. Upton, who also is a pronounced pacifist, was accepted, but the Cincinnati delegation, which included National Committeeman Rudolph K. Hynicka and Colonel William Cooper Procter, objected strenuously. They said they wanted a woman opposed to suffrage on the committee from Hamilton County, but the real reason is said to be a desire to discipline Longworth for his independent attitude in the organization of the National Congress.

The Harding matter came to the front when former Chairman Walter F. Brown, a Roosevelt lieutenant, said the committee should know where Harding stands. A committee was named to ascertain. It developed in a long discussion that Ohio Republicans do not regard Harding as a man strong enough to lead in the present industrial and social crisis. They favor General Leonard Wood, it was stated, with Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois for Vice President. Senator Hiram Johnson also has friends.

The committee, however, is in favor of Senator Harding for re-nomination and re-election, and they took action to reform the primary system so as to bring back the modified State convention. Governor and Congressmen are to be picked in popular primaries, however.

Gets D. S. C. for Deed in 1905.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—In the first retroactive use of systems of awards for gallantry put into effect during the present war, President Wilson has directed that the Distinguished Service Cross be awarded to Captain Henry L. Harris, Jr., for bravery in action in the Philippine Islands in 1905. He was then a Lieutenannt in the 22d Infantry, and, according to the citation, "gallantly and fearlessly directed the movements of the most exposed part of the firing line, and without regard for his personal safety, was the first man to enter the stronghold of the enemy" during the fight before Paruka-Utig's Cotta, Island of Jolo, on May 3. He has since returned and lives in Nutley, N. J.

WARNS VIOLATORS OF THE DRY LAW

Supervising Internal Revenue Agent Tells How Measure Will Be Enforced.

NO FURTHER LAXITY

Matters Now Solely In Charge of Federal Authorities, Who Will Use Drastic Measures.

Daniel L. Porter, Supervising Internal Revenue agent for this district, sent out a warning yesterday to all persons who might deem it safe to violate the war-time prohibition law because of some apparent laxity heretofore in enforcing it. He explained that the matter is now solely in the hands of the Internal Revenue Department; that sufficient men and backing would be placed at his disposal to enforce the provisions of the act, and that rigid measures would be commenced immediately.

Speaking of the bill just passed by Congress enforcing prohibition, Mr. Porter said that even if the President does not sign it and does not veto it, it will become a law in ten days, which he thought would be on Oct. 22. He told of how drastic the measure was, and quoted Section 7, as follows:

Any room, house, building, boat, vehicle, structure, or place of any kind where intoxicating liquor is sold, manufactured, kept for sale, or bartered in violation of the War Prohibition act, and all intoxicating liquor and all property kept and used in maintaining such a place, is hereby declared to be a public and common nuisance, and any person who maintains or assists in maintaining such public and common nuisance shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than $100 nor more than $1,000, or be imprisoned for not less than thirty days or more than one year, or both.

If a person has knowledge that his property is occupied or used in violation of the provisions of the War Prohibition act and suffers the same to be so used, such property shall be subject to a lien for and may be sold to pay all fines and costs assessed against the occupant of such building or property for any violation of the War Prohibition act occurring after the passage hereof, which said lien shall attach from the time of the filing of notice of the commencement of the suit in the office where the records of the transfer of real estate is kept; and any such lien may be established and enforced by legal action instituted for that purpose in any court having jurisdiction. Any violation of this title upon any leased premises by the lessee or occupant thereof shall, at the option of the lessor, work a forfeiture of the lease.

Emory R. Buckner, of counsel for the brewers in their various suits to permit the brewing and sale of 2.75 beer, declined to comment on the matter yesterday, but another authorized spokesman for the brewers said:

"There is not much doubt but that the new law will result in new suits based on the constitutional provision that property cannot be taken away except by due process of law. The brewers will contend that the destruction of their business is the same as taking away their property."

DEAD CONVICT'S GLANDS PUT IN MAN OF 60

Operation in San Quentin Penitentiary to Test Youth Restoration Theory.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 17.—Thomas Bellon, a young murderer, was hanged today at San Quentin Penitentiary, and after his death, interstitial glands from his body were transferred to a man of 60, also a prison inmate, to test the efficacy of the theory of restoration of youth.

Bellon was pronounced dead at 10:36 A. M., the body was hurried to the prison hospital. There on an operating table lay the aged convict. The body of Bellon was lifted to an adjoining table and his interstitial glands were removed.

Then the glands were transferred to the other's body. Unable to feel pain, because of anaesthetic injected into the spine, he talked with the doctors as they cut and sewed.

The surgeons believe that new strength, mental as well as physical, will follow the operation. Similar results, it is said, have come from such operations previously performed at the prison.

SENATOR WILLIAMS'S NAP.

It Began in Senator Penrose's Chair and the Owner Protested.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Senator John Sharp Williams of Mississippi, who yesterday delivered his sensational speech in the Senate on the Irish question, drifted over to the Republican side in the Senate today and soon fell asleep in the seat of Senator Boise Penrose of Pennsylvania.

Presently in came Senator Penrose. Seeing the Mississippian in the wrong chair he jokingly wrote a note to the Clerk of the Senate inviting attention to the fact that Mr. Williams was misplaced, and suggesting that under the circumstances spectators in the galleries unfamiliar with the faces of every Senator might suspect, on consulting the Senate identification cards, that the statesman asleep in chair 7 was none other than the senior Senator from Pennsylvania, instead of Mr. Williams, whose right seat is No. 13 in the front on the Democratic side.

The Clerk sought advice from a Senator, who aroused the slumbering Mississippian and escorted him to a more comfortable abiding place.

Kelly to Succeed Senator Foley.

James D. Kelly, for several years member of the Assembly from the Twelfth (Manhattan) District, will succeed James A. Foley as Senator from the Sixteenth Senatorial District. He was nominated last night at a meeting of the Democratic County Committeemen from the Twelfth and Fourteenth Assembly Districts which are comprised in the district Mr. Foley, now Democratic candidate for Surrogate, represented in the Senate. The district is overwhelmingly Democratic.

Nine Saloon Men Indicted.

The Federal Jury in Brooklyn returned indictments yesterday against nine saloon keepers for violations of the war-time prohibition law. Before Judge Chatfield the nine men pleaded not guilty and were held for trial on Nov. 5.

TAMMANY FEARS STAMPEDE OF IRISH

Major Kelly May Poll Enough Votes to Elect La Guardia and Curran.

BAR OPPOSITION DREADED

Newburger-Smith Campaign to be Launched at Carnegie Hall Next Tuesday.

Tammany is complaining bitterly that the Irish vote is being stampeded to the Liberty Party, which has for its lone candidate Major Michael A. Kelly, formerly of the "Old Fighting" 69th Regiment. Tammany district leaders and their lieutenants have received imperative orders to leave nothing undone to check the stampede and bring back to the reservation those who have strayed from the Tammany fold, but admit that they are not having much success at it, because the straying simply won't listen to reason.

No one believes that Major Kelly can win, although he boasts that he will get at least 250,000 votes as joint candidate of the Liberty Party and the People's Independent Party of Brooklyn for President of the Board of Aldermen, but probably will not get more than half of that. But it is feared in Tammany circles that he may absorb enough of the Tammany vote to make a victory of the Republican candidates for President of the Aldermanic Board and for Borough President of Manhattan not unlikely.

It is estimated that 950,000 votes will be cast in the entire city on election day. This would allow for some 135,000 saying away from the polls. Some experienced politicians believe that this estimate is excessive, and that the number of voters will be more nearly 1,000,000 than 950,000. In any event approximately 375,000 votes would be required by a candidate to make victory possible with three tickets in addition to the Socialist ticket in the field. The Socialist candidate for President of the Board of Aldermen is not expected to poll more than 100,000 votes this year.

Murphy Exhorts Leaders.

Tammany leader Charles F. Murphy has talked most earnestly to his district leaders in an effort to impress upon them the seriousness of the situation where the organization is confronted with defection among an element that all during the past has formed the backbone of Tammany's strength in every election, in addition to the defection that is regarded by Tammany men as inevitable as a result of the turning down of Justices Joseph E. Newburger of the Supreme Court and Richard H. Smith of the City Court for renomination.

Political observers predict that the bulk of the malcontent vote, Irish, German, Austrian, or Hungarian, will be divided between Major Kelly's party and the Socialist Party. Indirectly, of course, Justices Newburger and Smith will profit from any defection from the Tammany ranks, and so will the Republican candidates.

Major Kelly has Jeremiah O'Leary of the Friends of Irish Freedom, who recently was acquitted on a sedition charge, as one of his most conspicuous supporters, but his appeal is broad enough to comprise other elements affected by the political unrest, for, besides his Irish freedom plan, the Liberty Party platform contains a plank demanding that a hands-off policy be pursued toward Soviet Russia, which is attractive to voters with Bolshevist sympathies.

At the headquarters of the Nonpartisan Judiciary Committee, which is backing the Independent campaign of Justices Newburger and Smith, it was announced yesterday that ex-Supreme Court Justice John W. Goff had agreed to be one of the speakers at the Carnegie Hall meeting scheduled for next Tuesday evening, which will mark the opening of the Independent Newburger-Smith campaign. The other speakers will be Charles E. Hughes, George W. Wickersham, Martin W. Littleton, Clarence J. Shearn, and Bainbridge Colby.

The opening rally of the Newburger-Smith campaign in the Bronx will be held on the following evening at the Morris High School, 168th Street and Boston Road. Dr. Stephen S. Wise of the Free Synagogue and Bainbridge Colby will be the principal speakers.

Joseph R. Truesdale, Chairman of the Speakers' Bureau, issued an appeal yesterday for volunteers to take active part in the campaign. Emory R. Buckner, Charles E. Hughes, Jr.; Leonard M. Wallstein, John H. Iselin, William Bondy, Alfred C. Coxe, Jr.; John J. O'Connell, Harold A. Content, and Nathaniel B. Phillips were named last night on a committee to plan for the protection of the interest of Justices Newburger and Smith at the polling places on election day.

DENOUNCES ARMY AIR RACE.

La Guardia Varies His Attacks on Tammany and Hylan.

Representative La Guardia, Republican candidate for President of the Aldermanic Board, yesterday varied his attacks on Tammany Hall and the City Administration with an attack on the transcontinental air race and the De Havland airplane.

"The recent transcontinental race is a most pathetic display of selfish interests," he said. "The toll of death in this race is beyond all expectation of the percentage of casualty necessarily involved in an undertaking of this kind.

"The same gang that disregarded war in order to develop and help their own industries now send boys across the Continent with an obsolete discarded machine in a vain hope to save their face. I venture to state that 90 per cent. of the fatalities would not have happened in any other machine."

WOMEN SEE MAINE IN LINE.

Legislature to Vote on Suffrage Amendment Nov. 4, Leaders Hear.

It was announced yesterday by the National Woman's Party that word had been received from Mrs. Lawrence Lewis of Philadelphia, Chairman of the Executive Committee, who is now in Maine, to the effect that she had had a conference with Governor Milliken of Maine in which he said he was calling a session of the Legislature for Nov. 4, when the Federal Suffrage Amendment would be voted upon.

Governor Milliken said that it was practically certain that the amendment would go through, reported Mrs. Lewis, as this is the same Legislature which gave the women of Maine the right of Presidential suffrage which they now enjoy.

Mrs. Robert Treat Whitehouse, Maine Chairman of the Woman's Party, is in New York discussing the question of lobbying with Miss Alice Paul, the Woman's Party head.

MAYER SEPARATES BROOKLYN CAR LINES

450 Transfer Points Abolished as Cty Company Takes Over Twenty-eight Roads.

MEANS ZONE-FARE SYSTEM

City May Establish Bus Service for Patrons Burdened by the Change.

The order directing the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company to return the property of the Brooklyn City Railroad Company to its owners for independent operation was signed yesterday by Federal Judge Mayer. Immediately thereafter, the Brooklyn City Company announced it would begin operating its twenty-eight lines at 12 o'clock tonight, and that 450 transfer points between its lines and those of the B. R. T. Company would be eliminated.

A new schedule of routes was made public, showing that the zone method of charging will be established over many lines. Any person riding into one of these zones on a car will have to pay an extra five-cent fare. Many so-called "long riders" of the Brooklyn City Company will have to pay at least two fares. Later they may have to pay more, if the zones should be increased.

H. Hobart Porter, general manager, said the company had not been able to formulate a general policy except as to routes and fares in accordance with the company's "franchises and contracts."

A statement issued by Lindley M. Garrison, receiver of the B. R. T. Company, said transfers would be continued between the De Kalb Avenue line of that system and the lines of the Nassau Electric Railroad and the Brooklyn, Queens County and Suburban Railroad Companies as heretofore. Transfers with cars of the Brooklyn City Company, he said, would be discontinued.

Rerouting of Cars.

The following rerouting of B. R. T. lines was announced:

Flatbush-Seventh Avenue line will be operated by way of Flatbush Avenue, Fifth Avenue, Atlantic Avenue, Livingston Street, Court Street, Joralemon Street, Fulton Street, Boerum Place, and Livingston Street.

Rogers Avenue line will be operated over Flatbush Avenue, Livingston Street, Court Street, Joralemon Street, Fulton Street, and Boerum Place.

St. John's Place line will be operated over Flatbush Avenue, Livingston Street Court Street, Joralemon Street, Fulton Street, and Boerum Place. These lines were formerly operated by way of Fulton Street and Borough Hall loop. The exchange of transfers between Park Row cars will be at Livingston Street and Boerum Place.

The Hicks Street line will be operated on Hicks Street, between Hamilton and Atlantic Avenues only. The Union Street line will be operated to Hamilton Ferry only. The Sixty-fifth Street-Eighty-sixth Street line will be operated from Eighteenth Avenue by way of the West End right of way, Bath Avenue, Fourteenth Avenue, Eighty-sixth Street to Fifth Avenue.

The Broadway line will be operated over Fulton Street and Crescent Street to Cypress Hills. The Broadway Ferry shuttle will be operated between Bridge Plaza and Broadway Ferry only. The Jamaica Avenue line will be extended to Alabama Avenue. The Wyckoff Avenue line will be terminated at Wyckoff and Myrtle Avenues.

It was said the new routes would inconvenience many Brooklyn patrons, especially those living in the Park Slope section, and that many might have to pay three fares, two on the Brooklyn City lines and another on the B. R. T. system. The free transfer points on the Brooklyn City lines are:

Avenue C and Flatbush Avenue, between those lines.

Nostrand and Tilden Avenues, between Nostrand Avenue and Holy Cross Cemetery lines.

Meeker and Graham Avenues, between those lines.

Nassau and Manhattan Avenues, between Nassau Avenue line and the cross-town, Graham Avenue, Lorimer Street, and union Avenue lines.

Nostrand Avenue and Malbone Street, between the Nostrand Avenue and the Lorimer Street and Tompkins Avenue lines.

Bushwick and Flushing Avenues, between the Bushwick Avenue and the Flushing Avenue and Union Avenue lines.

Bush Street depot, between the Court Street and Hamilton Avenue lines.

Flatbush Avenue and Malbone Street, between the Flatbush Avenue and the Lorimer Street and Tompkins Avenue lines.

Flushing and Classon Avenues, between the Greenpoint and the Flushing Avenue and Graham Avenue lines.

Fulton Street and Nostrand Avenue, between the Nostrand Avenue line, westbound, and the Fulton Street line, westbound, and vice versa.

Harrison Avenue and Lorimer Street, between Tompkins Avenue line, westbound, and the Lorimer Street line, westbound, and vice versa.

Flushing Avenue and Grand Street, between the Flushing Avenue and the Grand Street lines, to passengers paying cash fares east of Newtown Creek or Onderdonk Avenue.

Flushing Avenue and Fresh Pond Road, between Flushing Avenue and the Flushing-Ridgewood lines, to passengers paying cash fares east of Onderdonk Avenue.

Junction and Union Avenues, between the Flushing-Ridgewood and Grand Street lines.

Public Works Commissioner Guider of Brooklyn said he would confer with city officials in a day or two to plan a bus service so that those who have to pay a double fare on the cars will have the option of riding between their work and their homes for a five-cent fare.

Judge Mayer's order directs Receiver Garrison not to pay the $300,000 rental due to the Brooklyn City Company Oct. 1, and to complete details for the complete separation of the companies.

Nixon Censures Mayor Hylan.

Commenting on Judge Mayer's order Public Service Commissioner Lewis Nixon said the writ issued by Justice Finch of the Supreme Court prohibiting him from acting in the application of the Manhattan and Queens Traction Company for an increase in fares, had greatly limited his powers. He said he had tried to save the transfer system so that the public might ride for seven cents, where now they may have to pay from ten to twenty cents.

"Attempts are being made," he said, "to create the impression that I stand for a higher fare. I do stand for a fare that will prevent the destruction of the physical part of the system of transit whose integrity it is my duty to safeguard in the interest of the people.

"The Mayor ignored my request that the elevated and surface roads should transfer at a two-cent rate. He may take satisfaction in preserving some state of mind that costs the people five cents instead of two. In the name of the peoples' prophet, he is now causing increases of vast sums (through extra fares) in the people's burdens, increasing the tax rate by refusing to aid in making rapid transit bonds self-supporting and directly injuring the credit of the city.

When the question of the forfeiture of the Manhattan and Queens Traction franchise for alleged violation of its provisions came before the Board of Estimate yesterday, Borough President Connolly of Queens contended that the board was without jurisdiction because of an injunction issued by the court. A letter from Jefferson M. Levy, reviewing the financial situation of the rapid transit companies, was read and referred to the Committee on Finance and Budget. The letter said the condition of the companies was so serious that it should receive immediate attention.

"The situation," wrote Mr. Levy, "should have been settled months ago by advancing the fares of the subways. At that time seven cents would have been sufficient, but as the interest has been so largely increased and expenses so enlarged by delay, I feel it will cost more than seven cents to operate the system."

RUSH FOR KAISER PICTURES.

Socialist Organ Attacks Authorities for Trying to Suppress Them.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Oct. 17.—"My Lord, the Kaiser," writes the Socialist paper Het Volk, calling attention to the pictures of the ex-Kaiser appearing in Het Leven, and saying that it never before has been heard of that the Ministry of Justice should take any preventive or repressive steps to stop the publication of pictures, but that in this case he warned and even menaced Het Leven with seizing the whole edition if the pictures could be considered as portraits and not snapshots.

The paper argues that pictures often are published in Holland which are more than those of the ex-Kaiser, but no steps were taken.

"By what right can the Minister of Justice seize an edition and has the man who threw away his sword and crown at the frontier so much to say in the Netherlands court of justice that friendly acts can be committed for him other than for Netherlanders? the paper asks.

One feels that there is something more than a cat and dog fight between the Kaiser and the publisher. It is a question whether Justice and perhaps also the Government will stand with bent knees before the Kaiser who finished his miserable career with desertion and if the worst sort of lackey spirit is to rule democratic Holland."

The paper explains that the law which prohibits publication of a portrait as long as the demand of the person concerned is reasonable, rational, arguing that unless it can be proved that the ex-Kaiser's desire not to have the picture published is reasonable, then the paper cannot be prosecuted. The person photographed can claim damages if he suffered through publication, says the paper, but nothing is known of a regular claim for damages from the Kaiser, and the damages claimed cannot excede two hundred florins, so that the public prosecutor had no right to threaten to seize the publication.

There has been such a rush for the Kaiser pictures that several new editions were published.

BELGIAN-DUTCH RELATIONS.

Amsterdam Editor Scouts Reports That an Alliance Is Contemplated.

Commenting on the reported treaty of alliance between Holland and Belgium, G. J. M. Simons, foreign editor of the Amsterdam Telegraaf, who is now in this city, issued the following statement yesterday on information he said he had received from high Dutch authority.

"Holland is surprised at some articles published in Belgium to the effect that a Belgian-Dutch alliance is contemplated. It is even rumored that Belgium will give Holland military guarantees. I have received from the highest Dutch authorities the following information:

"In a speech from the throne, the Queen of Holland has declared that Holland will formally join the League of Nations as soon as three powers have signed it, and the Dutch Government, through its Minister of Foreign Affairs, Baron van Karnebeek, has pledged itself to carry out the declaration of the Queen.

"As Italy, France, England and Belgium have already signed, the ratification of the League by The Netherlands is already assured.

"It is therefore entirely useless for The Netherlands to form a military alliance with Belgium. Article XXVI. of the Peace Treaty provides that there shall be no neutral powers when a member of the League is attacked, for then each adherent to the League must permit the passage of war materials over its territory, and must also give every other facility to the members of the League that the exigency requires.

"Belgium is already a member of the League of Nations, and Holland will soon follow. So it would be an absurdity for them to form any alliance outside the League, such as the rumored Dutch-Belgian military alliance.

"The committee now sitting in Paris to consider the joint navigation of the River Scheldt and the operation of the existing treaties between Holland and Belgium has decided that it is to the best interests of both powers that boundaries and regulations shall remain as they have been heretofore.

"The Belgian proposals with regard to the neutrality of the channel of the River Scheldt have not been looked upon with favor by the high committee. The committee is of opinion that the present régime of the Dutch fully protects the interests of Belgium, and that its maintenance offers the best guarantee for the friendly relations of the two countries and the future prosperity of independent Belgium.

"Prominent Dutch envoys will participate in the international labor conference to be held in Washington this month. The representatives of The Netherlands are: Mgr. Nolen, one of the foremost Dutch statesmen and leader of the Catholic party in Holland; M. T. Verkade, a prominent figure in Dutch industry, and Mr. X. J. Oudegeest, the well-known leader of the Socialist Party.

The Story of a Remarkable Clothing Situation

Many men bought little clothing last year, waiting for prices to go lower. These men have helped create a greater demand than ever for clothing this season. The cost of making clothing keeps steadily rising. Retailers everywhere complain of scarcity of merchandise and consequent high prices. $125 Men's Suits and Overcoats are their common talk.

Gimbels saw this situation coming. They prepared for it with all the strength of their three-store buying power, and so this great Men's Clothing Store opened the Fall season with the largest stocks in its history.

To Men Who Know the Clothing Market of To-day This Brief Story Speaks Volumes

We have $1,000,000 worth of men's high grade clothing, said to be the largest stock in any retail store in the city—and all this tremendous stock was contracted for at long-ago prices, with all the special reductions that go with such unprecedented purchasing.

Gimbels have set their sale prices at just a fair profit on these very low costs—and, regardless of how the market rises, these prices will stay where they are as long as the stock lasts. So, with retailers on all sides filling in stocks at present-day high prices, Gimbels low prices are creating a veritable sensation.

And So Men Are Finding Gimbels

For, Now As Never Before, Large Stocks Mean Low Prices

The crowds at our sales of one and two weeks ago demonstrated that men are coming to realize that fact.

Come to Gimbels. You can do wonders in picking out a suit or overcoat with this great assortment to choose from.

THOUSANDS IN FEES PAID TENANT LEAGUE

East Side Renters Didn't Know Just What They Were Getting for Their Money.

LEAGUE DEPOSITS OF $8,500

Some Witnesses Thought They Were Insured Against Further Increases—A Landlord's Troubles.

At least one member of the Tenants' League of the east side has used that organization to promote his own welfare, according to the testimony given at the John Doe proceedings begun yesterday before Chief Justice of Special Sessions Frederic Kernochan. In the effort to show whether a crime had been committed, it was shown by the answers elicited from witnesses by Assistant District Attorney Theodore L. Waugh that tenants had paid over to agents of the Tenants' League amounts varying between $5 and $6 under the belief that they would thus be protected from further increases in their rents. One landlord testified that a committee of the league had taken over into its hands the determination of the extent to which repairs would have to be made in his house and had also collected the rent. Justice Kernochan, before leaving the bench, said that the proceedings "looked rather high-handed."

The Tenants' League of the east side, which is said to be a branch of the Greater New York Tenants' League, has its offices in the same building in which are located the headquarters of the Socialist Party of the Sixth Assembly District, and Abraham Beckerman, the Socialist Aldermam, is Chairman of the Executive Committee of the tenants' organization. It was at this office, at 106 Avenue C, that many of the tenants paid their fees. Municipal Court Justice Morris Eder, who has tried more than 400 rent cases in the Essex Market Court since the first of the month, and who was invited by Mr. Waugh to give his views to the newspapermen after the formal hearing yesterday, said that he believed the "Socialists wanted the money for campaign purposes, and they do not want the strikes to cease, because, as long as they continue, they furnish campaign material." Mr. Waugh added that the District Attorney had evidence that the league had deposited in the State Bank since Sept. 3 more than $8,500.

At the opening of the hearing yesterday afternoon, Nathan Hirsch, Chairman of the Mayor's Committee on Rent Profiteering, at whose instance the proceedings are being conducted, stated to the court that he was desirous of making the position of the committee clear.

"The committee is not doing this," he said, "to intimidate in any way any tenant who has a complaint to make, or to prevent him from applying to the committee for a just reduction of his rent. Every complaint that we receive will be given prompt attention. We want him to complain freely, for we want no stoppage of the work that we are doing. But what we do desire to do is to protect him from what we believe to be lawless men and women who are willing to mulct tenants and to harass them. We believe that these people have fomented strikes to the detriment of the best interests of the tenants themselves."

The inquiry was concluded with the examination of the landlord and three tenants of the houses at 385-389 East Eighth Street. The combined efforts of Justice Kernochan, District Attorney Waugh and Captain Charles A. Goldsmith of the Mayor's Committee, who acted as interpreter, were necessary to get a clear statement from the tenants as to what they expected in return for the money they paid to the Tenants' League. In the end, they agreed on only one point, that one of the benefits to be derived was the receipt of signs printed in red ink on which was the legend in English and Yiddish, "This house is on a rent strike."

Samuel Lefkowitz, the owner of the houses, told a long story of his troubles with his tenants and the difficulties he had encountered in settling with them, as he refused to recognize the authority of the Tenants' League to collect his rents or to determine what repairs were to be made on the premises.

Among the officers listed on the letterhead of the Tenants' League of the East Side are Rose Elias, Organizer; Isaac M. Schiff, Treasurer; L. M. Sackin, counsel, who is now running for Surrogate on the ticket of the Socialist Party; Charles Gross, Secretary, and Abraham Beckerman, Chairman of the Executive Committee.

As it is understood that another branch of the Tenants' League is being formed in Williamsburg, District Attorney Swann will confer today with District Attorney Lewis of Kings County.

ASKED TO AID WHITMAN.

State Industrial Employes Say They Were Canvassed for Election Fund.

Employes of the State Industrial Commission were asked by officers of the commission for campaign contributions to help re-elect Governor Whitman last Fall, it was brought out at yesterday's session of the committee investigating the affairs of the commission before Special Commissioner J. F. Connor in the City Hall.

Several employes testified that they were urged by Deputy Commissioner David M. Stone, in charge of the Brooklyn office, and by William E. Heide, private secretary to Manager F. Spencer Baldwin of the State Insurance Fund, to contribute sums of money and that they gave the contributions to Commissioner Wiard.

The witnesses, many of whom are Democrats, swore that Secretary Heide told them that they had to contribute to Governor Whitman's campaign fund if they hoped to get an increase in salary. They were told, they swore, to give the money either to Commissioner Wiard or to William Coffey, Secretary of the State Industrial Commission. Most of the witnesses testified they made a contribution of $10. It was brought out that Heide, Manager Baldwin's secretary, has disappeared and that all efforts to subpoena him have been unsuccessful.

OFFICE WORKERS UNLOAD ADRIATIC

Line Employes Handle Passengers' Baggage, Taking Places of Striking Piermen.

ADMIRAL STRAUSS RETURNS

Commends Navy Men Who Swept Up 22,000 of the 57,000 Mines Laid in the War.

When the White Star Liner Adriatic arrived yesterday from Southampton and Cherbourg the baggage of the 865 cabin passengers was handled by a force of 125 employes of the International Mercantile Marine Company, including cashiers, steamship passenger agents, clerks, pier superintendents and pursers from vessels that were out of commission.

Strikers stopped taxicab drivers from driving in at the pier gates to receive the passengers' baggage as it came down on the escalator and compelled them to pick it up with their fares at the front entrance, and otherwise interfered with pier workers. It required six policemen to keep the gate clear so that the passengers could get out.

Among the passengers on board was Rear Admiral Joseph Strauss, U. S. N., returning from his work of picking up the mines in the North Sea which he had laid in making the submarine barrier from the Orkney Islands to the Norwegian coast, a distance of 400 miles. In speaking about the work of the officers and men of the United States Navy in the North Sea, Rear Admiral Strauss said:

"We laid 57,000 mines and have swept up 22,000, and it is a great credit to our navy men that they did the work without bonus, without extra pay, and with no other incentive than to do their duty. We lost ten lives in the dangerous task, and it required eighty-two vessels, which included the Black Hawk, the flagship, and another ship, both being repair ships, to do the work. The field covered 6,000 square miles, and there were times that the little mine sweepers stayed out in the stormy, mined area of the North Sea for a month, hoping for better weather so as to get at work."

Admiral Strauss said that the fleet of mine sweepers and submarine chasers that comprised the Grand Mine Sweeping fleet had started on the voyage home to the United States via the Azores.

Another passenger was Major Gen. Sir Anthony Bowlby, who was consulting surgeon to the British forces in the war and is Surgeon in Ordinary to King George. He was accompanied by Sir Robert Jones, chief consulting surgeon and specialist in restoration of injured limbs. They have come here to attend the meeting of the American College of Surgeons on Oct. 20 and will visit some of the principal cities in the United States before returning to England.

Emil J. Simon, a radio engineer of New York, who also arrived on the Adriatic, said that the specially constructed Zeppelin which was ready at Spandau to start for New York to drop several tons of bombs on the city when the armistice was signed, last November, was soon to come here on a peaceful mission in charge of American flying officers if the allied Governments would permit. It was the only Zeppelin that the Germans did not destroy, he said.

The Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, pastor of the Clinton Avenue Church, Brooklyn, returned after attending the World Alliance of Churches conference in London.

Captain A. E. Franklin of Idaho, who has been in Esthonia and Riga, and Felix Cole, Chargé d'Affaires of the United States Embassy after it was removed from Petrograd to Archangel, were other passengers. Mr. Cole said there were no diplomatic representatives of the Government now in Russia. Colonel J. A. Ruggles of Rockford, Ill., Military Attaché of the United States Embassy in Russia, also returned on the Adriatic and went to Washington.

Pays $310 for Rare Volume.

The second day of the sale of the Evert Jansen Wendell library, at the American Art Galleries, brought the total up to $15,898. The highest price yesterday was $310, paid by George D. Smith for "The Fool's Opera," by Matthew Medley, London, about 1731. It contains a "Sketch of the Author's Life." H. Carroll paid $250 for the "Thespian Mirror," edited in 1805-6 by John Howard Payne, author of "Home Sweet Home," when only 13 years old.

FORD ASSETS $332,998,121.

FREES HETTY GREEN ESTATE FROM TAX

Surrogate Fowler Rules She Never "Did Business" in New York State.

SEES INJUSTICE TO RICH

Deplores Application of Inheritance Law Against Persons Who Leave Much Property.

Surrogate Fowler decided yesterday that Mrs. Hetty H. R. Green was not "doing business" in New York State at the time of her death, although she had millions of dollars invested here in various enterprises, and that the investment of her fortune did not come within the meaning of the statute permitting the bulk of her property to be taxed at the time of her death.

In an opinion on the efforts of authorities to subject the fortunes of the rich to the inheritance tax law when persons leaving property in this State are non-residents, the Surrogate said:

"In democratic republics the growing danger of injustice is not to the poor, but to people of property.

"That the modern processes of taxation are being subtly misapplied to the ends of the socialistic movement is generally admitted by professional economists. Some, indeed, profess that a political and social strife has already been declared in the regions of taxation, and people of property are beginning to claim that taxation in aid of social reform is a clear usurpation and unconstitutional. It is in such a moral and political atmosphere that this simple case, and hundreds like it, come on to be heard by the courts.

"The deceased happened to have been a woman of large estate. Had Mrs. Green's estate in her lifetime been managed by agents or attorneys, the present contention of the State Controller—that she was engaged in business in this city—would in all probability not have been made."

The Surrogate said Mrs. Green "kept no 'open shop' or place of resort for the public. She made no transactions but her own, and in a legal sense such transactions were not her 'business,' but her private affairs." The opinion adds:

"The appraiser's report shows that Mrs. Green's investments in the State of New York consisted of deposits in banks, mortgages on New York real estate, purchases of New York City bonds and corporate stock, and certificates of deposit. It shows she deposited in banks the income derived from these investments.

"The Westminster Company, incorporated under the laws of New Jersey, was organized to take over her active investments. Its books show that at the time of Mrs. Green's death it owed her about $26,000,000. When her securities were transferred to the company their value was credited to her account. When the interest or dividends on such securities were received by the company they were distributed to the stockholders in the form of dividends, and not credited to her personal account. It seems to me that the business conducted by the company was not the business of the deceased.

"If a tax law does not expressly include property it cannot be taxed by implication. Should this appeal be decided in favor of the State Controller I cannot see why citizens of other States who speculate in brokers' offices in New York or who loan their foreign money to banks in this city do not also come within the law. If so the tax law will either have to be amended or New York will soon cease to be the monetary centre of the United States."

Mercier in Cleveland Cathedral.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 17.—Cardinal Mercier, Primate of Belgium, had a rather quiet day today compared to yesterday. At 8 o'clock this morning he officiated at a low mass in St. John's Cathedral. Then he rested until noon, when he addressed a mass meeting. This afternoon the prelate was the guest of the Catholic clergy of the Cleveland Diocese and tonight he addressed a gathering of women. He will leave tomorrow for Toledo.

BUTLER'S BALLY MAKES A RUNAWAY RACE OF IT IN ECLIPSE HANDICAP

BALLY A POPULAR VICTOR AT YONKERS

Band Plays "Wearing of Green" When Butler's Horse Beats Over There with Ease.

DRUMMOND RUNS GOOD RACE

Three-Year-Old Captures Grey Eagle Purse—Favorites Have Success at Empire City.

Ever since the Autumn meeting at Yonkers began, Finnegan's Band has been waiting to play "The Wearing of the Green" in honor of a triumph for James Butler, President of the Empire City Racing Association, and the band did not wait in vain. The chance came yesterday at the finish of the Eclipse Handicap, at a mile and a sixteenth, when Bally, the five-year-old pride of the Butler stable and a favorite with Yonkers patrons, galloped under the wire about ten lengths in front of his only rival in the race, W. R. Coe's Over There, for the easiest kind of a victory.

The last time the band played "The Wearing of the Green" at Empire City was one day last July, when Bally won one of the greatest triumphs of his career by taking the measure of S. C. Hildreth's great Lucullite. But, even with the surprise that attended that victory, there was scarcely any more cheering than yesterday, when Bally again rewarded his friends.

Bally had no such opponent as Lucullite to subdue yesterday, and it was something of a surprise to those who had followed both horses to find that the Coe racer had been made a 2 to 5 favorite, while Bally was being offered at 2 to 1. Over There had indicated in his last previous start that he was over-raced, and that he was no longer at top form. But the fact that Over There had beaten Bally in a race at Aqueduct was taken as the evidence that he would do it again.

There had been only three named for the Eclipse Handicap, and J. L. Donahay withdrew his Cudwell to run him in another event on the card, thus leaving the contest to Over There and Bally. The Butler horse, which has been training faithfully for some weeks in preparation for a victory at Yonkers, was at his best and was able to win as he pleased, once Jockey Kummer gave him his head.

Falters in Stretch.

For six furlongs the two horses raced on even terms. All through the backstretch they had their noses together, and it was impossible to say that either had a lead at any time. To the six-furlong pole it seemed that Over There was running just as strongly as the Butler horse, and those who backed the favorite were confident. But at the beginning of the far turn Kummer began to move up with Bally, which was running on the inside. Bally gradually drew away until he had a lead of a length. The two ran in this position to the head of the stretch, and Fairbrother gave Over There a lash with the whip and endeavored to go to the front.

That was the end of the race as far as Over There was concerned. He made one leap forward, then seemed to tire suddenly and lose all his speed. He swerved in the course, and, coming through the final furlong, seemed to be staggering rather than running. He was thoroughly tired and unable to maintain any speed. Meanwhile Bally had raced with fine speed and drew away so rapidly in the stretch that he was ten lengths in front at the wire. Kummer rode him hard at the beginning of the stretch drive, anticipating a strong challenge from Over There, but when he saw that the Coe horse had practically given up the struggle, he eased up on Bally and the final hundred yards were covered in a canter.

The bright weather brought out an unusually large crowd, one of the best since the first day of the meeting, and a fairly good day of sport was provided, despite the fact that the events were contested for by cheap horses in most instances. The track was slow but improving rapidly under a warm sun, and if no more rain falls before racing time today the course should be fairly fast.

Drummond's Victory Is Popular.

The Grey Eagle Purse for three-year-olds, which was one of the features on the card, was captured by M. Shea's Drummond, which scored his first victory in many months. Drummond took the measure of Pastoral Swain, Poultney and Cromwell at a mile and seventy yards, and was an easy winner by three lengths. He was also a popular winner, for he was an odds-on favorite. Drummond had run a number of times this season, with such fleet racers as Lucullite and Sir Barton, and, though he had never finished in the money against such horses, he was considered good enough to beat such as he had to contend with yesterday.

Pastoral Swain went into the lead and remained in front to the head of the stretch, leading by two lengths at one time, but never able to shake off Drummond. The latter was under restraint for most of the distance and did not begin to move up until making the turn into the stretch, when Rowan sent Drummond along and caught Pastoral Swain in the stretch. Once Pastoral Swain lost the lead, he was through. Drummond just romped the rest of the distance. Poultney and Cromwell were outrun from the start and were many lengths back of the others at the finish, both seeming to be badly outclassed.

W. R. Coe's Thunderbird graduated from the maiden class in the first race, which was at six furlongs for two-year-olds. Thunderbird has been knocking at the door, but has never before been good enough for his opposition. Yesterday he ran a strong race, and, coming from behind at the head of the stretch, moved up from fifth position to win by a nose. Mrs. M. H. Paterson's Bridge Player, which has been a consistent performer and which was the favorite, ran a good race and had the event won up to the last hundred feet, when the winner came along with a rush. Larghetto was third in the field of eleven.

Myers, who had the mount on Thunderbird, did not get away to a good start and Thunderbird was running in the second flight going through the back stretch. The jockey found an opening and moved over to the rail, saved enough ground to get within striking distance of Larghetto and Bridge Player, which were out in front, and then came with a rush as he hugged the rail turning into the stretch. Larghetto weakened in the final furlong.

Cousin o' Mine Shows Speed.

A field of twelve maidens 3 years old and upward, went to the post in the second event and the race went to Frederick Johnson's Cousin o' Mine, which, well handled by Buxton, stole a long lead making the first turn and lasted to win by a length. Le Balafre was second and Parable third. The rest of the field was strung out all along the stretch.

Cousin o' Mine opened a gap of five lengths in the back stretch and seemed to be tow roping the others. But going around the turn into the stretch he began to tire and was slowing up when Le Balafre came along. Buxton rode his mount out to gain the decision, for Le Balafre was wearing the winner down. Susan M., the favorite, failed to get away with a jump and was cut off at the first turn and forced to race on the outside all the way. The effort to get up to the leader took so much out of her that she gave it up at the far turn.

The Crown Stable's Adele, which had not been out since early in August, came back in good form and won the third race at six furlongs from a field of fourteen cheap sprinters. Adele just managed to get up in the last few strides to win. L'Infirmier set a fast pace to the final furlong and seemed to be the winner a sixteenth from home, but Mountain got him into the heavy going and he slowed up at the finish and failed to get into the money. Ninety Simplex took second and Helen Atkin was third.

J. W. Williams's Jack Mount scored again in the final race of the day, once more defeating Bar One. Monomoy was third. This was a test at a mile and a sixteenth and Jack Mount led all the way, increasing the margin until he had five lengths to spare at the finish.

RACE GOES TO KING GORIN.

Baker's Horse Runs to His Best Form in Latonia Feature.

LATONIA, Ky., Oct. 17.—R. L. Baker's King Gorin ran to his best form today and captured the feature event on the card, after coming from behind at the head of the stretch. Though he won by less than two lengths, he was going away at the end and proved to be much the best. Galli Curci was second and Discussion third.

King Gorin seemed to be out of the race until the final furlong, as he was running sixth in a field of eight. Discussion got way in front, but was never more than half a length in front of Galli Curci, and the race seemed to be between these two until King Gorin suddenly made his bid and came on with such a rush that he caught the leaders and won easily. Discussion tired in the stretch, but Galli Curci made a game finish. Lady Fair Play, which was well fancied, did not get up at any stage of the race and was fourth all the way.

W. Woodward's Opportunity won a close decision from Soslus in the third race, which was a six-furlong sprint for three-year-olds and upward. Opportunity was in front all the way, but raced neck and neck with Soslus for the last quarter. Neither could make any appreciable gain and Opportunity was the victory by a neck. TRULY RURAL WINS ON LAUREL TRACK

Two-Year-Old Returns to Best Form and Defeats Mock Orange in Well-Judged Race.

LAUREL, Md., Oct. 17.—The colors of Harry Payne Whitney flashed down in front here today on his two-year-old filly, Truly Rural, which won the juvenile event of the day quite handily from J. Farrell, Jr.'s Mock Orange. Rapid Traveler was third, and Limerick Lass trailed in last.

Truly Rural, which has run some good races this season, but which had not shown at her best here, seemed to be at top form today and ran much the strongest race. Fator judged the pace nicely and saved his mount for the final drive. Rapid Traveler lived up to his name and set a sizzling pace for five furlongs, but at that point was badly used up and quit. Mock Orange had been second all through the early running, while Truly Rural was close up. When Rapid Traveler began to weaken, Fator rushed Truly Rural to the front, coming through on the inside at the turn to take the race by nearly a length.

There was a surprise in the last race, when Sam C. Hildreth's Poacher failed to get better than third in a field of six over the six-furlong course. The race went to The Decision, from the stable of G. W. Forman, with G. O. Talbott's George Clark second. Poacher is a noted mud runner, and the track was expected to suit him exactly today. However, he failed to show his usual speed and was never out-in front.

The summaries:

FIRST RACE.—Purse $1,000, for two-year-olds, selling; six furlongs. INTERNATIONAL POLO PUT OFF UNTIL 1921

Hurlingham's Request for Delay in Challenge Readily Granted by U. S. Association.

The resumption of international polo between teams representing the United States and England has been put off definitely until the Summer of 1921. This became known last night when William A. Hazard, Secretary of the Polo Association, gave out correspondence which had passed between Viscount Valencia, Secretary of the Hurlingham Club committee, and Mr. Hazard.

The idea has prevailed for some time that the United States team would go to England next Summer in an effort to win back the cup which the Hurlingham team captured just before the war. English critics have contended for some months that it would be impossible for that country to place a representative team in the field for championship competition, owing to the losses in men and mounts during the war. The communication recently received bears out this contention. The correspondence between Viscount Valencia and Mr. Hazard was as follows:

Hurlingham Club, Fulham, S. W.

Dear Mr. Hazard—We have resumed our polo this season to some extent, but the war has left us with a severe shortage of ponies. Many of our regiments are still abroad, and as we are unable to conjecture for how long, we see no hope of regaining our full polo strength for the present.

Under these circumstances our Polo Committee thinks that it will take us until the Summer of 1921 to be able to put a team into the field worthy of such stalwart opponents as the American Polo Association, and has authorized me to put before your association the proposal that we should postpone our next trial of strength till the year after next.

Your association has on former occasions met us with such sportsmanlike consideration that I feel it will once more be disposed to fall in with our proposal, and appreciate that our anxiety is to make our next contest worthy of the record which our friendly rivalry of past years has established.

We are looking forward with much pleasure to meeting in the polo field, and the fact that the two nations have been so happily associated in a victorious campaign will add to our pleasure in welcoming polo players from the United States.

I am, dear Mr. Hazard, yours as ever,

Chairman Hurlingham Club Committee.

The following reply was sent to the Hurlingham Club by Mr. Hazard:

Polo Association,
29 Broadway, New York,

Viscount Valentia, C. B., Chairman Hurlingham Club Committee, Fulham, S. W. London, England.

My Dear Lord Valentia:

Upon my return from my holidays I find your favor without date which I understand reached my office Saturday, Sept. 6.

The committee of the Polo Association has no wish to challenge until you feel that we can have a good sporting event, and perhaps by 1921 your men and mounts, and ours, will be in better form than would be possible in 1920.

As you suggest, it is therefore quite satisfactory to the Polo Association to abandon all thought of challenging for 1920 and we shall hope that circumstances will permit of our doing so for 1921 and that your club will be in a position to accept. With assurances of my regard, I remain

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) WILLIAM A. HAZARD,
Secretary and Treasurer.

HORSES COVER 242 MILES.

Castor Only Entrant in Long Race with Perfect Time Score.

Special to The New York Times.

CONCORD, N. H., Oct. 17.—In bright sunshine and with a large crowd of spectators present, the fourth day of the cavalry endurance test came to a finish on the fair grounds at Concord, N. H., at 5 P. M. today. Five contestants, the four Arabians—Crabbet, Kheyra, Ramela, and Rustem Bey—and the Morgan, Castor, came in and waited fifty yards from the finish line for several minutes till the ten hours had elapsed which gave them the right to check in. All these horses thus achieved a perfect time score for the day, but only Castor has maintained the flat time of 40 hours for the 242 miles thus far traveled.

Bob lost 9 minutes today, giving him a total of 40 hours and 9 minutes. Donjon, the third contestant with a flat score, dropped out at noon, leaving Rustem Bey, 40:05, Kheyra and Ramela each with 40:49 as next in the contest on the basis of time. The remaining horses, however, all came in within twenty minutes of the leaders.

The contestants began to get away from the fair grounds at White River Junction, Vt., at 7:07 A. M., led by Ramela. This mare's condition has steadily improved since the first day under the careful handling of her rider, which has proved one of the features of the race. She must now be regarded as a dangerous contender for first honors, as her feed score is low. Feed score, which counts 25 per cent., promises to be an important factor in determining the winner.

Twenty minutes later the last horse, Ched, the Morgan, had checked out, and the judges set off in automobiles for Potter's Place, N. H., the half-way feeding station, for the day. The sun came out about 10 o'clock, drying the mud and furnishing ideal conditions for the ride.

The horses came in well together at noon, but Donlyn, the Morgan stallion, was obviously very tired. After examination by the veterinary, the judges ordered him withdrawn, as further continuance could only be useless, and would lead to serious injury to a game animal. He had started out lame behind, and was all in by midday. This is the third entry to fall by the wayside.

Generally speaking, the six Arabs are in the best shape, and it would not be surprising if they took all three places. The probability of an extra day being needful to reach a decision grows. The final leg ends Saturday night at Camp Devens, and the extra day, if one is necessary, will be announced then.

GIANTS' OWNERS BUY TRACK

Stoneham and McGraw Said to Control Havana Race Course.

Charles A. Stoneham and John J. McGraw, President and Vice President, respectively, of the New York Giants, have bought the controlling interest in the Havana Race Track from "Curley" Brown, according to reports which reached here from Cuba yesterday. While it was impossible to verify the report of the sale here, it is believed by friends of the owners of the Giants to have been consummated, as it is known that the deal has been pending for some time.

Stoneham and McGraw arrived in Cuba several days ago and left there yesterday for Key West on their way to New York. It is understood that McGraw has had an interest in the Havana track for some time, and it is known that he has been endeavoring, with Mr. Stoneham, to gain control. George W. Loft entered into a deal some time ago for the purchase of the property, but the deal fell through because the parties could not agree on all the conditions.

Stoneham has long been fond of racing, having an interest in a stable which has been represented at the local tracks this season. McGraw, too, is an old-time lover of the sport and a regular attendant at the tracks after the baseball season is over. It is understood that the price paid for the Havana property was more than $1,000,000, though no definite figure was announced.

A. A. U. TO ACT ON BOXING.

Championship Board Will Discuss Disposition of Amateur Events.

John J. Walsh of the Pastime A. C., Chairman of the Metropolitan A. A. U. Championship Boxing Committee, has called a meeting of the board for Friday night, when arrangements will be made for the conduct of this year's ring championships.

It is expected that some indication of the disposition of the title events will be furnished at the coming meeting. At present, it is understood, the officials are undecided whether to conduct the bouts under the auspices of the association itself, or share the promotion with one of the local clubs, as was the case last year with the district championships. These bouts were held under the joint auspices of the American Railway Express Employes Association and the Metropolitan A. A. U. at Madison Square Garden Concert Hall. The result was an unexpected success, financially and competitively, which brought home to A. A. U. officials a realization of the popularity of the sport in this city. The New York State championships were conducted last year at the City A. C.

Just what disposition will be made of this year's fixtures remains to be seen. It is probable, however, that, in view of the intense interest shown in amateur ring contests, the A. A. U. will decide to conduct the bouts. Amateur boxing is riding on a high tide of popularity and it is likely that this condition will influence the officials in making disposition of the tournaments.

An illustration of the feeling toward amateur boxing was furnished at the Seventy-first Regiment Armory recently, when the trials for the European tour were conducted under conditions which made the bouts open to the public. It was one of the infrequent occasions when amateur boxers were permitted to perform before the public, for the tournaments held frequently during the Fall and Winter are for club members only. At the Seventy-first Regiment an official count of the attendance disclosed that more than 3,500 spectators had paid to see the bouts.

Tournaments have been conducted at several of the armories as part of recruiting rallies, and these, too, have attracted record crowds. Two tournaments were promoted at the Twelfth Regiment Armory and on each occasion it was estimated that crowds of 4,000 turned out for the bouts. At the 59th Regiment Armory Wednesday night, when another recruiting rally was conducted, it was estimated that 3,500 persons were present for a series of thirteen bouts. The recruiting rally tournaments differed from the Seventy-first Regiment affairs in that admission to the Twelfth and Sixty-ninth Regiments' armories was free.

KYRONEN OUT OF RACE.

Illness Will Keep Millrose Distancer from Cross-Country Run.

Villar Kyronen, one of the Millrose A. A.'s star distance runners, will be unable to compete for his club in the coming national ten-mile run championship or the title cross-country races. This was disclosed yesterday when word reached the Metropolitan A. A. U., through Pete Hegelman, trainer of the Millrose athletes, that the little Finnish runner was confined to his home in Bay Ridge with a severe attack of pneumonia.

Kyronen's illness will upset the plans of the Millrose officials. He was looked upon as a sure point-scorer for the club in the hill and dale tests, and a dangerous contender for the

SEVERAL LEADING ELEVENS FACE FIRST REAL TEST OF GRIDIRON SEASON IN TODAY'S GAMES

DAY OF BIG GAMES FOR COLLEGE TEAMS

Pitt vs. Syracuse Promises Football Extraordinary—Colgate Tackles Cornell.

HARVARD TO FACE BROWN

Crimson May Find Plenty of Action Today—Easy Contests for Yale and Princeton.

"Just how good is Pittsburgh?" is a question that is being asked with increasing insistence each Saturday in football circles. Today's meeting between Glenn Warner's Panthers and the big Syracuse team up-State should provide the first definite answer, and, incidentally, produce one of the hottest gridiron affairs of the entire season. Both teams are undefeated thus far, both are exceptionally well coached, and both command an unusual supply of good material.

In 1917, when these two elevens met for the last time, the Pittsburgh aggregation, on its way through a season unmarred by a single defeat, swamped the Syracusans by a score of 28 to 0. But things are different this year.

Warner no longer has the battering ram MacLaren, who used to be able to smash through any line at will, and although Davies, Hastings and DeHart combine both speed and power, they may find equally fast backs opposing them today. Buck O'Neill and his assistant coaches have shown a disposition to sacrifice weight for the ability to pick openings and get over the ground fast, and the result may be an orgy of open-field running instead of the crushing formations that are generally to be expected in a struggle between two well-coached teams.

Whatever happens up at Syracuse this afternoon, the spectators are sure to be treated to some real football. The Orange clan point with pride to last week's victory over the Army at West Point, and having tasted blood they are not apt to be worried by any reputation that the Pennsylvanians bring with them. It looks like a great battle.

Colgate Is a Favorite.

Two more unbeaten teams get together up at Ithaca when Cornell faces Colgate, with the betting favoring the latter at 10–8. The Ithacans may be handicapped by the absence of Half Back Davies from the lineup, but they still pin their faith chiefly on the mighty foot of Captain Shiverick, who stands alone among the punters and drop-kickers of recent football history. Coach Speedy Rush seems inclined to try the old Princeton system of steady defensive play, waiting for a break of luck to bring the ball within scoring distance, and, with such dependable punting in his favor it may prove successful even against so strong an eleven as Colgate's.

Larry Benkart, on the other hand, believes in applying the scoring punch right from the kick-off, and has developed a machine which has already proved its ability to tear through any ordinary defense, and to score without great difficulty against even so strong an opponent as Brown University. Colgate has the psychological advantage of a one-sided 20–0 victory to its credit, representing the most recent meeting of these rivals, and its eleven this season is unquestionably stronger than that of two years ago. Cornell, however, also showed strength against Williams last Saturday and may be expected to put up at least a valiant resistance.

Brown May Tax Harvard's Power.

Harvard should get its first real test today from the sturdy representatives of Brown University, who, although already victims of Colgate's attack, are counted among the important teams of the year. The Crimson is potentially a great eleven, with Eddie Casey, probably the best running back of the year; Captain Billy Murray, the Horweens, and other stars in the lineup. But no opponent has yet worked Coach Fisher's defense very hard, and it is an open question whether Harvard's attack will prove thoroughly formidable when confronted with an opposing aggressive and perhaps equally efficient machine. Much will depend upon the Harvard line, which contains some comparatively green material, but has thus far looked fully equal to Harvard standards of the past.

Yale and Princeton are both taking their football leisure today. The Tigers, after a strenuous afternoon spent in subduing Lafayette last Saturday, will be satisfied to get some ordinary practice from the Rochester University eleven today, this team substituting on the schedule for the disbanded Fordham aggregation. Yale takes on the Boston College team, which was easily defeated by Harvard two weeks ago, and will probably adhere to her policy of not showing too much of her real strength.

Big Game Locally Today.

New York City has the opportunity to enjoy one of the best games on the schedule today, for the clash between Columbia and Williams on South Field should be a thriller from start to finish. On paper, the Williamstown crowd looks the stronger, with a record last week of holding Cornell to a single field goal. Columbia, however, has been developing slowly. Coach Dawson paying special attention to defensive play, with the result that his team has not yet been scored on. A victory over Vermont by one touchdown, however, does not represent much of a basis for comparison. If Dawson's men can keep the Williams team from scoring, they have a pair of good kickers in Shaw and Captain Canapary, who, between them, might easily slip over a surprise. A victory, or even a good showing, today would mean that Columbia is again represented by an eleven worthy of her great traditions of the dim past.

After playing two games away from home, New York University makes a start in its own town this afternoon with Wesleyan as an opponent, and this battle also looms like a toss-up, with at least an even chance of a successful metropolitan début for the Lavender. Stevens, after taking its old rival, Haverford, into camp last Saturday, entertains the Connecticut Aggies at Hoboken this afternoon, and hopes to do a little plowing on its own account.

Rutgers goes gameless today, but Lehigh, last week's amazing upsetter of Foster Sanford's too highly touted juggernaut, has substituted the New York Aggies for Albright on its schedule, and is all primed for a regular scoring bee.

Penn State to Visit Dartmouth.

Dartmouth and Penn State should provide another classic up at Hanover, for the team from the coal regions has had no real opportunity to assert itself as yet, and, with no less than twenty-five veterans on the squad, is just aching for a chance at some highly respected eleven like the big Green one. Dartmouth 10, Penn State 7, was the score when these two giants of what was once called "minor college football" mixed it up in 1917, and an equally close result today would not be surprising, with a chance for a reversal of past performances.

Down in Philadelphia the University of Pennsylvania may be the recipient of a little surprise package from its older rival, Swarthmore. The little Hicksite Quaker co-ed institution has managed to build up an amazingly strong series of football teams year after year, and the history of its relations with the powerful neighboring university is by no means a constant record of defeat. Two years ago Pennsylvania, was glad to win by a score of 10 to 0, and although her eleven looks stronger this season, with the best of the old material back in action, her own undergraduates seem none too sanguine as to the outcome of today's game. In metropolitan circles Penn is credited with a splendid scoring machine, but evidently they take a lot of convincing in Philadelphia.

Of the rest of the Eastern contests, that between Lafayette and Haverford looks like a sure thing for the Easternians, after their great showing against Princeton last week. Trinity and Amherst should stage a good battle at Hartford, and Union and Hobart will be evenly matched at Schenectady. Maine will invade West Point none too cheerfully.

Away down South in Atlanta, Georgia Tech will revive old memories in meeting Vanderbilt, that famous maker of Southern football history. In the Middle West Ohio State tackles Kentucky, while further out the schedule brings together Michigan and the Michigan Aggies, Chicago and Purdue, Indiana and Minnesota, Northwestern and Wisconsin, and Nebraska and Notre Dame, worthy rivals all.

HARVARD ELEVEN IS PRIMED FOR BROWN

Crimson Seeks Revenge for Defeats of Other Years—Murray Returns to Lineup.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 17.—Three years ago, when Robinson's Varsity football team from Brown last came to the stadium for a game with the Harvard College eleven, the Brunonians scored three touchdowns and won, 21 to 0. Last Fall, Robbie's S. A. T. C. team beat Harvard, 6 to 3, and on this account tomorrow's engagement between Harvard and Brown is likely to prove more strenuous than an ordinary mid-season meeting.

Harvard has surely been putting in hard work all the week in its endeavor to establish its strongest front for the Providence football outfit, and today, after three days' hard drilling, Coach Bob Fisher put in the time brushing up plays and getting his men ready for open field work, particularly for running back kicks and defensive work on forward passes, of which Brown usually has an abundance.

It had been hoped that Harvard would be able to try out its staunchest rush-line in this game, which will be the last hard contest before the game at Princeton three weeks hence. However, Centre Rush Philbin is not yet in shape to stand hard football, and Thursday's injury to Phinney will keep this veteran wing out of tomorrow's game and probably several others. The team, however, will have Billy Murray back in the line-up, although it is by no means certain how long he will be allowed to Captain his team on the field. The coaches are handling him carefully, just as they are handling Quiet, cool Eddie Casey, the brilliant half back. The calibre of these men being well known, the coaches' attitude is that they do not need a great deal of work in order to be at the top of their game for the November going.

A shift has been made in the back field since last week, Humphrey, who was doing well at quarter back, having been placed at the head of the Harvard tandem. Casey will start and so will Horween. Ryan's work at left end has been good, perhaps better than Phinney's on interference in the line plays, and Havermeyer has been coming fast in the middle of the line. Brown has suffered some severe losses of players since the Colgate game, but has a rugged team.

Salter, one of the tackles who has shown the most improvement recently; Holmes, a guard, and Nelson and Hamilton, in the back field, are a few of the extra players likely to get a full share of work in the game.

BROWN HAS HIGH HOPES.

Mass Meeting Before Harvard Game Shows Plenty of Optimism.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 17.—Brown University was ablaze with enthusiasm tonight, the whole student body, many of the Faculty and alumni joining in a big mass meeting in preparation for the game with Harvard at the Cambridge Stadium tomorrow. Speeches were made and the team was cheered, the whole atmosphere being one of hope, if not confidence, that the eleven will bring home the bacon.

Coach Robinson gave the players their final signal practice this afternoon, and when the whistle blows tomorrow the team will be in the best condition that it has attained thus far this season. The lineup of the team will be as follows: Albright, right end; Johnston, right tackle; Captain Nichols, right guard; Brace, centre; Shurtleff, left guard; Sinclair, left tackle; Brisk, left end; Coulter, quarter back; Emery, right half back; Brooks, left half back; Armstrong, full back.

Although Coulter is slated to start at quarter, Coach Robinson will also use Fox, the former Brown star, during the game, and on the showing made in this position tomorrow will probably depend the selection of the regular quarter back. Brown, without having shown especial strength thus far, goes up against an aggregation of admitted power, especially in the back field.

Only twice in the history of football relations between the two colleges have the Brunonians been able to defeat the Crimson. The first time was in 1904 when the eleven with Fritz Pollard, put over 21 points, and in 1918, when the Brown service team won 6–3.

YALE TO MEET BOSTON.

Coach Sharpe Calls Off Scrimmage, Fearing Injury to Regulars.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 17.—Yale expects real opposition in the game against Boston College tomorrow afternoon and as a result the Elis took things easily this afternoon. There was no scrimmage for the Varsity, the first eleven being put through a long signal drill, followed by a practice in running back the kick off, in which the entire eleven showed proficiency.

The lineup, as announced tonight, shows Kempton in Welles's place. Welles, who started both the Springfield and North Carolina games, was on the side lines in "civies" this afternoon, with his leg bandaged. He strained a ligament yesterday and will be out of the game for several days. With Kempton showing the best form of his football career, the team will not be weakened materially by Welles's absence. Kempton, French and Braden, with Laroche at quarter back, will be the Yale back field in tomorrow's game.

It is expected that Boston will show a varied open attack, but to meet it Yale has been practicing all the week. In French, the Elis have one of the best killers of forward passes ever turned out here and he is expected to play a leading part in smearing the overhead tosses of the Boston College backs.

Coach Sharpe announced tonight that Fred Graham, the big end who has been out of the game since the first week of the season, will be able to get in on one of the flanks if necessary tomorrow and it is believed that he will be given a few moments play against Boston. Graham is Yale's best end.

Yale doesn't figure on running up much of a score against Boston and will be content with holding the Bay Staters in check. It will be Boston's first game against a Yale team and the interest in it is unusual. The Yale lineup will be as follows: Allen, left end; Hamill, left tackle; Galt, left guard; Callahan, centre; Acosta, right guard; Walker, right tackle; Reinhardt, right end; Laroche, quarter back; Kempton, left half back; French, right half back; Braden, full back.

West Virginia to Meet Maryland.

Special to The New York Times.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Oct. 17.—West Virginia's practice was held today on a field deep in mud, but it was spirited, and the men are ready for the Maryland game here tomorrow. The Maryland team arrived at noon, and had a light workout on a field adjoining that used by West Virginia. The visitors are the heaviest team met by West Virginia so far this season.

Hill will start at half back in place of Lentz tomorrow, and Hite will be at quarter back position, though Rodgers at full back will call the signals. The line will be the same as that which started against Pitt. The reserve team has gone to Indiana Normal to play tomorrow.

AERIAL ATTACK BY TIGERS.

Princeton Expected to Depend Upon Forward Pass Against Rochester.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 17.—Indications based on today's football practice point to at least six changes in the makeup of the Princeton team. Of the eleven men who faced Lafayette last Saturday only five have sufficiently satisfied the coaches this week to have that call on their positions for the University of Rochester game in the Palmer Memorial Stadium tomorrow.

There was no scrimmage this afternoon. The men were taken down to the stadium for a long signal drill, and the belief is that the men who made up the Varsity for the major portion of this workout will take the field against the up-Staters tomorrow.

The air currents in the big concrete arena are tricky, and Reper had Trimble, Lourie, and Y[illegible]er off to one side for a long punting drill. Wittmer got more distance with his spirals than the other two. To the other back field men fell the problem of catching the ball in the cross currents which blew over the field.

It appears Orange and Black men are going to depend on aerial football to a large extent for their points. This form of attack has not been used with marked success up to the present time, but the men have been trying it all week, and this afternoon's practice opened with all the backs on the throwing end of a long forward passing drill.

Coach Ballin had his linemen apart and put them through a short charging, breaking through, and blocking drill before the signal practice. McGraw was at right tackle and Harvey at right end, and Whitey Thomas was the centre choice. Keck was at left tackle, Speers played right guard in preference to Halsey, Morgan, or Sinclaire, and Rothchild returned to left guard from the second team, where he has been for a few days.

Frequent substitutions of the ends are expected. Stevenson, Wilson, Williams, Lamarche, and McNamara, all of whom worked out with Harvey and Bigler in getting down under punts today, are likely to get into the game.

Trimble has replaced Destefano at full back. Lourie and Garrity at the halves and Strubing at quarter back form the same combination as last Saturday.

A utility man is an unusual thing on a football team, but it looks as if Pinkey Baker has been elected this year to act in this capacity for the Tigers. Starting the year as an end, he was shifted to centre, from there to half back, and this afternoon he went to right guard, replacing Speers late in the practice.

Wesleyan Team in Fine Trim.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, CONN., Oct. 17.—About a score of Wesleyan players left here this afternoon for New York in charge of Dr. Edgar Fauvre to play New York University tomorrow. All the men were in fine condition and Wesleyan will put a strong team in the field. Dick Eustis, an old New York University football coach, has been here this week helping Coach Liston drill the squad.

ODDS SAY COLGATE WILL BEAT CORNELL

Betting at Ithaca Is 10 to 8 in Favor of Hamilton Eleven—Davies's Absence Felt.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 17.—Cornell meets Colgate here tomorrow afternoon in what promises to be one of the big games of the year for Central New York. On the eve of the game, Cornell's chances, which, in the judgment of students of the game, have never been too bright, were materially reduced by the news that, in all probability, H. F. Davies, left halfback and one of the best players on the team, would be unable to start and that a substitute back, either McKenzie or Hasbrouck, would play in that position.

Davies has been troubled for several weeks with an injury which in the last few days has grown worse, and the chances tonight are against his being able to get into the game.

Another change that was indicated today was at right end, where Cunneen will start instead of Wilson, the latter not being in very good shape. The remainder of the line-up will be the same as against Williams, with Colvin at left end; Taylor, left tackle; Pendleton, left guard; Horel, centre; Miller, right guard; Sutton, right tackle; Shiverick, quarterback; Mayer, right halfback, and Shuler, fullback.

The Ithacans held a secret signal drill this afternoon and then listened to a short pre-game talk by Coach Speedy Rush. The Colgate team is at Cortland, twenty miles away, planning to come over by automobile tomorrow noon. Odds are in Colgate's favor, the betting now being quoted at 10 to 8, with plenty of Cornell money at such figures.

The general opinion is that Colgate has the better chance, but it is admitted that Cornell's offensive strength remains a mystery and that Rush may have something up his sleeve. The Cornell head coach has nothing to say about his team's chances.

COLGATE READY FOR GAME.

Maroon Football Squad Has Final Drill for Clash with Cornell.

Special to The New York Times.

HAMILTON, N. Y., Oct. 17.—The Colgate football team left for Ithaca by automobile late this afternoon after a short light practice, with the cheers of the entire student body ringing in their ears. The demonstration was occasioned by the realization of the students as well as the team that one of the most important struggles of the season will take place at Ithaca tomorrow afternoon. The coaches are not any too confident as to the chances of the team against Cornell, but they are of the opinion that if they lose it will only be after a hard and determined battle.

They have announced that the team is in good condition and is rapidly approaching mid-season form. Practice today was devoted entirely to signal drill, and the team and the substitutes were put through every play until the coaches were satisfied, and they were not satisfied until it was seen that the Maroon team would make no mistakes in its signals.

N. Y. U. FIT FOR BATTLE.

Wireless to Send News of Wesleyan Game to Middletown.

The final touches in preparation for the game with Wesleyan today were put on yesterday by the New York University football team. A light signal drill and a limbering up practice constituted the work for the day.

Assisting Head Coach Longwell yesterday was Dr. Cusack, who in 1915 was the star drop-kicker of the Violet. He spent a great deal of the afternoon coaching the linemen, and then took Captain Howard Cann in hand and helped him with his drop-kicking. The consistency with which the New York leader put the pigskin over the bar was extremely encouraging.

Announcement was made yesterday by the Scholarship Committee to the effect that Jake Ferguson had passed off the conditions which had made him ineligible and will be able to play today. Ferguson was the star half back of the informal S. A. T. C. eleven last year, and he will materially strengthen the attack of the team. His eligibility is especially welcome just now, as Welnheimer, one of the regular half backs, is suffering from an injured shoulder and may be forced to leave the game.

The Violet will be without the assistance of Adams, the 145-pound guard who showed up so well in former games. The problem confronting Coach Longwell is the filling of the vacancy.

The lineup today will probably be as follows: Parkhurst and Mooney, ends; Storey and Baker, tackles; Guiney and Martindale, guards, and Brinn, centre. Ferguson will run the team, with Captain Cann and Weinheimer at halves and Horrigan playing full back.

Reports of the game will be sent to Wesleyan by wireless. The athletic authorities at the Connecticut college have asked permission to use the New York University wireless station and will send an operator to forward the details of the play to Middletown.

CRIPPLES IN ARMY SQUAD.

Several Regulars Will Not Start in Maine Game This Afternoon.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 17.—The Army eleven got its final workout on the gridiron this afternoon in preparation for the Maine game tomorrow. Injuries to some of the best men will make the Army's chances less promising than was expected. White, Blaik, McQuarrie, Breidster, and Schabacher are all in the hospital today.

The soldiers ran through a snappy signal drill today, and did considerable work with the punters, Lystadt and Warren alternating in the kicking for the Varsity. Two important changes in the lineup were made today when Keefer was shifted to Blaik's end position from tackle, and Gregory got a long workout as a ball-carrying back. Both these men will start in their positions tomorrow.

The Army's probable lineup tomorrow will be as follows: Ends, Stout and Keefer; tackles, Daniel and Travis; guards, Vogel and Kelly; centre, Green; quarter back, George or Wilhide; half backs, Gregory and Warren; full back, Lystadt.

FOUR CONFERENCE GAMES.

Big Elevens of Middle West in Important Contests Today.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—Coached and trained to midseason form, eight Western Conference elevens will go into action tomorrow in contests likely to develop into the most important of the season.

The games will bring together Chicago and Perdue at Chicago, Minnesota and Indiana at Indianapolis, Illinois and Iowa at Urbana, and Northwestern and Wisconsin at Evanston. The other members of the conference, Michigan and Ohio State, will engage in contests of less importance. Michigan will face the Michigan Aggies at Ann Arbor, while Ohio State will play Kentucky at Columbus.

REAL TEST FOR COLUMBIA.

Strong Williams Eleven Meets Dawson's Men at South Field Today.

Benny Boynton and his Williams conorts will meet Columbia on South Field this afternoon in the second game of the year for the Blue and White eleven. With 200 or so loyal rooters trailing in its wake, the Purple aggregation intrenched itself last night at the Astor, and seemed to be full of confidence as to the outcome this afternoon. The game will begin at 2 o'clock.

Columbia last night resembled a large city on the eve of a world's series. A long line stood all day before the ticket window at the athletic office and discussed between purchases the possibility of stopping Boynton. A large influx of Williams money during the day also stirred the campus to activity. Many bets were laid, the largest being $300 to $150 on Williams. These odds held during the day, after falling from 3 to 1. Columbia men seemed ready to cover any bets, and apparently have no fears that the formidable Williams backfield will succeed in breaking through the Blue and White defense, which has been polished up to a high degree in the last week by Tom Thorp, the old Columbia lineman.

The same optimism was evident in the dressing room, where Head Coach Fred Dawson, after putting his team through its third straight secret workout of the week, pronounced it fit. He refused to make any predictions other than saying that the team would show fight and would be better for the week's rough treatment it had received at the hands of the strenuous Thorp. The line has undergone three alterations since the Vermont game, Kienninger and Hinch changing places at centre and right guard, and Scovil replacing Devine at right tackle. The left side remains intact.

Two eleventh-hour changes were made in the backfield. Charlie Shaw will take Thornton's position at right half back and will also do all of Columbia's punting. Applebaum will start at full back in place of Moszczinski.

Carick, Williams's right end, will be among the missing this afternoon, according to reports from Williamstown. He is still out from an injury. Christian will fill his position. The redoubtable Boynton will, of course, be at quarter back, and will be assisted by a backfield composed of Montgomery, Burger, and Hibbard.

The entire top floor of the Hotel Astor will be used for the training table of the Williams Football Team. A blackboard for the use of Coach J. W. Brooks in the final drill Qn Saturday has been erected and the top floor will be made the headquarters of the team and the two hundred rooters who accompanied it.

Straight football is the forecast for Columbia, with slight variations in the forward pass. The defense has received most of the attention this week, in the hope of preventing Boynton and the rest of the Purple backfield from getting past the forward line. Columbia is planning its hopes on the two ends, Kennedy and Towner, with a shoe on the defense against Vermont.

The probable lineups may be:

COLUMBIA.		WILLIAMS.
Kennedy	L. E.	Joslyn
Tower	L. T.	Lasell
Forsyth	L. G.	Fleser
Kleninger	C.	Mills
Hinch	R. G.	Gilham
Scovil	R. T.	Fargo
Welnstein	R. E.	Christian
Quigley	Q. B.	Boynton
Canapary	L. H. B.	Montgomery
Shaw	R. H. B.	Burger
Applebaum	F. B.	Hibbard

COLUMBIA CUBS BEATEN.

De Witt Clinton High School Eleven Wins by Score of 23 to 6.

The Columbia Freshmen were outclassed from start to finish by the eleven from De Witt Clinton High School yesterday afternoon on South Field, being defeated by a score of 23 to 6. The visitors lost no time in putting the game on ice, and in the first minute scored a touchdown from the kickoff, Eisenberg carrying the ball the length of the field on a criss-cross play.

The same player incidentally scored 15 of the 24 points and completely outwitted the Columbia defense at every moment. He made a half-dozen long runs, many of them for more than 20 yards, engineered several forward passes and, to top off the afternoon, kicked a field goal from the 20-yard line in the third quarter.

De Witt Clinton made its second touchdown at the beginning of the second quarter, when Blumberg, right end, skirted the end on another criss-cross formation. Galbraith kicked his second goal, making the score 14–0. A triple pass, Galbraith to Blumberg to Eisenberg, resulted in the third touchdown, Eisenberg traveling half the length of the field. De Witt Clinton lost a chance at the goal, the ball grounding on the pigskin.

Eisenberg's field goal in the third period completed the Maroon's scoring for the afternoon.

Columbia's only score came in the second period when Captain Burt caught a short forward pass and dashed across the line. Pullyn failed at the goal.

The Freshmen excelled in the forward pass and made most of their gains in that way. Out of nineteen attempts, fourteen succeeded, which is almost a record for South Field. In every other respect the team was powerless before the hard-running, aggressive high school team.

The lineup:

DE WITT C., (23.)		COLUMBIA. (6.)
Hanigan	L. E.	Russell
McAneny	L. T.	Mulligan
Levitz	L. G.	Walder
Payne	C.	Wacker

RUTGERS TO PLAY SCRUBS.

Cancellation by Rhode Island State Breaks the Regular Schedule.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Oct. 17.—The Rutgers football team will be idle tomorrow as a result of Rhode Island State's cancellation of the game scheduled for this week. While the enforced rest will not be welcomed by the coaches, it will give the injured men a chance to recuperate.

In order to keep the men in trim, however, the Varsity and scrub teams will play a regulation game, though some of the stars will be unable to get into the lineup. Beginning next week, Coach Sanford plans to drive his men at top speed, as they will not have another real contest before the Syracuse game in New York on Nov. 4.

STEVENS VS. CONN. AGGIES.

Much Expected from Goodale. Drop Kicker of Hoboken Eleven.

After a week of strenuous workouts the Stevens eleven is on edge for their game with the Connecticut Aggies at Hoboken this afternoon. The Engineers trounced the Aggies in their last encounter three years ago, but the visitors are expected to offer stiffer opposition in today's game.

Goodale fell down on his placement kicks in the Haverford game, but yesterday he dropped nine out of ten over the bar, and Eddie Egger has proved himself a reliable kicker and will do most of the punting hereafter.

Two late shifts were made for today's game. Heinen, who has been holding down every job on the line, has finally convinced the coaches that he is best fitted for end. "Pat" Howard will start the game at right guard.

SAM GRAHAM GAINS SEMI-FINAL ROUND

To Play Peacock, While Dean Will Meet Van Vleck in Greenwich Golf Tourney.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Oct. 17.—There was any amount of flumdoodles and crazy-quilt golf this morning and afternoon at the Greenwich Country Club before a pair of members and a couple of visitors gained the semi-final round, Sam J. Graham, the pride of the club, pushed aside obstacles and gained the right to clash in the semi-finals with Grant A. Peacock of Oakmont, the former Princeton playmate of Champion Davie Herron. In the lower half J. Simpson Dean, the tall, rangy giant, also from Tigertown, reached the semi-final along with C. Eddie Van Vleck of the home club.

Somebody put the skids under Gardiner W. White of Nassau, who yesterday won the qualifying medal. Tonight the young star from Long Island finds himself battling through the beaten eight, or twice beaten four or some other group of unfortunates. Henry J. Topping, Chairman of the Tournament Committee of Greenwich, was also treated rudely by Dean. Topping was ousted in the first round by 4 and 2, and then Dean hiked out after lunch to defeat R. D. Rooks of Metacomet by 4 and 2. Van Vleck had a particularly important day. After defeating his clubmate, Reggie M. Lewis, by 3 and 1, he met F. C. Newton of Brookline, the Staten Island champion, in the second round. Newton put out Ham K. Kerr of Greenwich in the morning. Van Vleck was never too sure of his victory, but he finally edged himself over into the semi-finals by one up.

Something in the nature of a jinx was in hiding near the sixteenth hole today, and among others, Gardiner White is sleuthing him. White was playing along fairly serenely in the morning, just about holding his own with Frank W. Dyer of Upper Montclair, a high class metropolitan golfer, but one who rarely defeats the Nassau champion. Dyer was 1 up as they played over the nice, wide fairway to the sixteenth. Both their drives were good enough, White's perhaps a little shorter, but such a matter was not to be noticed. Off on the course toward the fourteenth hole, which doubles back from the sixteenth, was a serious minded golfer who was attending to his own affairs. White played his second shot and had the luck of many Greenwich golfers in getting caught in a small bunker just piece of the green. Then Dyer addressed his ball, twiddled his feet and swung his stick a few times, and he too played for the flag.

Outside Assistance.

Frank Dyer's ball was headed for the bunker just as sure as Christmas is coming this year. Lo and behold, the gentleman who was minding his own business suddenly became a participant in the White-Dyer match! The latter's shot struck him with full force on the hip, caromed toward the green, skimmed nicely over the bunker and actually reached the putting surface. White allowed he had two opponents in his match—Dyer and Dyer's assistant. To make a long story not so long, White lost that sixteenth hole, giving Dyer a dormie advantage, and when the young Nassau golfer began to figure out the shot he lost enough of his golfing ability to lose the seventeenth to Dyer, who took the match, 3 holes up and one to play.

Grant Peacock was playing this same sixteenth hole in the afternoon round against G. E. Morse of Pine Valley when another rarity of golf occurred. Both balls were on the green in the regulation number of strokes, but Morse laid Peacock a perfect stymie, leaving his own ball about one foot from the hole, while Peacock's was about two feet away. Peacock tried to jump his opponent's pill with his niblick, but in doing so scratched the top of Morse's ball, started it toward the hole, and both fell in.

Reggie Lewis was victimized by at least two instances of super-brilliant putting in his morning match with Van Vleck. On the fifth hole Lewis laid Van Vleck a perfect stymie, but that didn't stop the latter for a second in his motive to win the match. He lay a full forty feet from the pin, yet he placed for the hole, and the ball curved around and past Lewis's and fell down for the longest putt of the tournament. At the seventeenth hole Van Vleck won his match by another phenomenal putt. His ball lay thirty feet from the pin, yet he tapped it straight and true and it dropped for a birdie 4, winning for him by 5 to 1.

Sam Graham is becoming about as dangerous an opponent during the Autumn tourneys as any other golfer in the Metropolitan district. He reached the final round at the Nassau event, and again showed excellent form at Piping Rock. Tonight Graham appears especially good in his home club affair. C. V. Benton of Hudson River is usually rated as a steady and dependable linksman, yet Graham, in the first round, sent him down into defeat by the wide margin of 7 and 6. In the afternoon Graham had to tackle Dyer, the conqueror of White. He won the first hole, became a square at the third but was never down. At the turn Graham led by 2 up, and taking advantage of Dyer's miserable putting at the fourteenth, he won the match, 5 and 4.

Dyer Plays Carelessly.

Dyer's score card shows a collection of careless playing rather than bad luck. At the ninth he took three putts for a half, when two for a victory would have been sufficient. At the tenth he became three down by missing a putt of about eighteen inches. At the eleventh he again outdrove Graham, but wasted shots near the green. He lost the third hole in succession by playing the uphill twelfth with an iron, falling short of the green. They halved the thirteenth in fives, although Graham deserved this one after Dyer had topped his second shot, played with an iron, which went into a sand trap partly filled with rain water, and then splashed out on the other side. Graham rimmed the cup on his fourth shot and missed a win. At the fourteenth, Dyer's longer drive, longer second shot, and longer approach shot put him on the edge of the green, whereas Graham was yards short. Yet the Upper Montclair player took three putts, missing one not more than two feet long.

Their cards follow:

Out—
Graham	4	3	5	6	4	5	4	4	4	—39
Dyer	5	3	3	6	5	4	5	5	4	—40
In—
Graham	3	4	3	5	6
Dyer	4	5	4	5	6

Dean and Rooks played only mediocre golf in their second round match. The Metacomet man had been watched with uneasiness by many of the Greenwich contestants because of his excellent work yesterday during the qualifying round, but today he seemed to have rougher sailing. He won his first round match by the narrow margin of 1 up from F. W. Potter of Westchester, but after lunch the Princeton giant took him in tow and led him too hot a pace for sixteen hol

IS NOT THE SHANTUNG LESSON ENOUGH?

Under the remarkable leadership of HENRY CABOT LODGE, the Republican majority in the Senate has been transformed, into a minority of but little more than one-third of the whole voting strength of that body, and upon an issue, that of the Shantung amendment to the Treaty, which Mr. LODGE has declared to be of supreme importance in the domain of morals and right international conduct. If Mr. LODGE were the head of a responsible Ministry he would have to resign. Disapproval of his procedures in opposition to the Treaty and the League is sufficiently loud and deep in high Republican circles to warrant the belief that he must already have been admonished that he is doing his party a great deal of harm. He will do it more harm, possibly irreparable harm, if he persists in the course he has thus far pursued.

The defeat of the amendment which Mr. LODGE has advocated with all his power of eloquence and persuasion is not an approval of the Shantung settlement. Senator HOKE SMITH of Georgia expressed tersely and sensibly what is undoubtedly the opinion of the country when, in explaining that he should vote against the amendment, he added, "although I regret the disposition made of Shantung by our representatives at Paris." The temporary concession to Japan of German rights in Shantung was made to avoid worse evils. But the country sees, the majority of the Senators see, that the way to redress the wrong is not through rejecting the Treaty but through establishing a League of Nations, before which Japan will be responsible for the fulfillment of her promise promptly to return the ceded territory to China.

The vote of 55 to 35 against this amendment should suffice as a lesson and a warning to obstructionists against further attempts to destroy the Treaty. Senator HALE of Maine told the truth when he said that "the country wants action." It has been made evident, as he said, that the Senate wants action. Why persist in forcing on that body obstructive amendments that in advance are doomed to defeat? Every day's delay further discredits the Republican majority in the Senate and its leadership, every day the country grows more impatient. We have insisted from the beginning that the Republican Senators opposed to the Treaty would never have the hardihood to defeat it by sending it back to the Peace Conference loaded with unacceptable amendments. That opinion is confirmed by the Shantung vote. The fruits of war have cost this country too much to be thrown away as the result of Senatorial strife begun in a spirit of partisanship and carried on in that spirit.

Mr. LODGE has said that if the treaty were rejected Germany would consent to any terms we might see fit to propose to her. He should never have made this statement. At a time when we had 4,000,000 men under arms or in training, when the armies of the Allies were still in the field, Germany stubbornly stood out against the demand for her signature, insisted on easier conditions. She yielded then. Mr. LODGE's belief, or assertion, that she would yield now, after general demobilization, puts altogether too much strain upon human credulity. But that point is not worth arguing. The country will not have the Treaty rejected by amendment, the Senate has demonstrated its resolve that it shall not be amended.

Domestic legislation of vital importance demands the attention of Congress. Nothing will be done so long as the Treaty blocks the way. Public opinion, the situation of the country, a prey to industrial disturbances, threatened even by worse evils, demand that there should be an end of these futile and dangerous tactics of opposition. The safety of other nations, the peace of the world, reinforce the insistence of our own people that the Treaty shall be advanced with the utmost possible speed to final ratification.

LONDON TO AUSTRALIA BY AIRPLANE.

The British Air Ministry is nothing if not audacious. Its approval of the Australian project of an airplane race from England to the Antipodes in thirty days and its ready co-operation make a case in point. It seems to be the British Government habit to encourage the daring always; if men are willing to risk their lives in a fantastic adventure, let them do it for the glory of the empire. The flight from England to Australia is such an adventure. Success may crown it, but there is only one chance in a great many that one of the aviators who are soon to take wing will ever reach the goal. The perils in some parts of the route are so great that a man must be a visionary to face them. Doubtless the British bookmaker, who offers odds on everything, will make them long against the arrival, dead or alive, of Captain HOWELL in his Martinsyde, or Captain MATTHEWS in his Sopwith, or Lieutenant RENDLE, Lieutenant WILLIAMS, Captain WATKINS, and Lieutenant POTTS in a big Kangaroo, or Lieutenant DOUGLAS in an Alliance, at the Antipodes.

A flight across the Atlantic we know is feasible, for a British pilot and an Anglo-American navigator left Newfoundland one Saturday afternoon and alighted in Ireland in time for church the next morning. But no one has since attempted the Atlantic passage without stops, or apparently had any heart for it. On paper it may be shown that with luck, an almost incredible lot of it, a man could fly from London to North Australia. Nowhere is there more than 500 miles of sea to cross, a trifling matter if the barometer is not low; but, what is much worse than 2,000 odd miles of Atlantic, there are vast jungles to traverse. "Between Bandoeng and Fort Darwin," says a London dispatch, "a distance of 1,750 miles, "(500 miles of sea,) there are no air-"dromes of any description," and General BARTON, who knows his geography, says that, after the aviators leave Calcutta, Burma, the Malay Peninsula and the East Indies "offer "only a slight chance of a successful "emergency landing in an airplane."

And then there are stretches in Asia Minor, Persia, and Baluchistan where the facilities for flying men must be very limited and the desert and its people are hostile to intruders from the air. Meteorological conditions in Asia, particularly as the Far East is reached, are uncertain and often cruel. These Britishers and Australians will set out with only prospects, no certainties about anything. Whatever preparations have been made at some of the dubious spots on the long route must be tentative and incomplete. COLUMBUS in his caravel did not take a tenth of the risks that these bold air pioneers will have to face. Luck be with them, but they will be throwing dice with Death!

DANGEROUS ALIENS.

By a vote of 281 to 1, Mr. GALLAGHER, Democrat, of Illinois, being the 1, the House has passed the bill continuing for a year the wartime passport regulations. Secretary LANSING and other Federal officials have shown the necessity of this continuation to keep out the Bolshevist and other revolutionary aliens who are waiting for the ratification of the Peace Treaty to descend upon our shores and aid their comrades here in working for the overthrow of the Government. Against incoming aliens, then, the country is safe for a year, if the passport regulations are strictly enforced.

Of the pestilent, far-reaching words and works of the Bolsheviki and their sympathizers now in the United States, every day's dispatches are full. A Federal official estimates that at least 50,000 aliens are "openly or secretly "working for a Bolshevist form of "government in this country. Many "agitators do not claim allegiance to "the I. W. W., but proclaim them-"selves Bolsheviki and Radical So-"cialists." Some five hundred papers and magazines in foreign languages are publishing revolutionary propaganda, much of which is written by agents. Some Finnish, Jugoslav, Hungarian, Lithuanian, and Russian periodicals are especially violent and revolutionary. They thunder against the bourgeois. They demand the destruction of the Government. They call for the proletariat State. The existing one is "in the hands of the capitalists." They seek to impose upon Americans the blessings of the gospel of LENIN and TROTSKY.

Why are these persons not arrested, punished, deported? A Washington dispatch in THE TIMES of yesterday contained this statement:

> The evidence of the activities of these foreigners is now in the possession of the Federal authorities, and there is reason for stating that a strict enforcement of the deportation laws against these alien trouble-makers is among the possibilities of the near future.

The enforcement of the deportation laws or any other laws should never be a possibility of the future. It should be a certainty all the time. Laws are made to be enforced. They should be enforced without delay, shirking, abatement, indulgence; enforced unsparingly, unflinchingly, every day, in the present and in the future. Thousands of Bolshevist alien agitators and propagandists ought to be deported. Why have they not been deported? When will they be deported?

The Sheriff of Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, who has had a good opportunity to study the methods and practices of some of these destructionists that have lent their kind assistance to the steel strike, writes to Senator KENYON, Chairman of the Senate committee investigating that strike, a letter, in one extraordinary passage of which Secretary WILSON and Attorney General PALMER must feel the keenest interest. Speaking of the methods followed by agents of the Department of Labor and the Department of Justice who have been investigating a charge, apparently false, that a woman organizer for the United Mine Workers, shot on Aug. 26, was murdered by Deputy Sheriffs, the Sheriff says:

> These investigators come here at the behest of these agitators, openly charging regularly elected and lawfully commissioned peace officers with most outrageous conduct for which there is not the slightest foundation, and pursue their inquiries any way but impartially. They usually, if not always, seek out the persons making the charges, and leave here with little else than manufactured evidence, and leave behind them a trail of anarchistic speeches and newspaper publicity with which to inflame the populace.
> These are grave charges. They must be met. It would be intolerable if, while Congress and all decent citizens are one in the stern purpose to check the propaganda of political, social, and economic revolution, and to drive out the alien revolutionists, Federal agents were neglecting their duty. In the case of officers of the Department of Justice, whose duty it is to bring those revolutionaries to punishment, such conduct seems not only unbelievable but unthinkable.

THE CAUTIOUS LUDENDORFF.

General LUDENDORFF has refused to give evidence before the German Parliamentary Commission which will investigate the responsibility for the war. This is perhaps a hopeful sign, for, if the inquiry were to be as solemn and thorough a whitewash as all such German investigations conducted hitherto, he would be entirely safe; he could be sure that the blame would be divided among Serbia, the Austrian ally, and Sir EDWARD GREY. If he refuses he must be afraid the parliamentaries mean business.

Till lately we had supposed that LUDENDORFF would be indictable only for losing the war, but if he tells the truth in his book he was a figure of some importance in the General Staff before it began, though he could have had practically nothing to do with the circumstances directly attendant on the outbreak. Perhaps he has some ground for fear, however, for in losing the war he committed a crime far greater, in the German mind, than that of the men who began it; and it is far from unlikely that the men in charge of the inquiry, while exculpating all Germans from moral guilt at the outset, may try to pick out a few scapegoats for the unhappy outcome of the venture. Already speakers in the Reichstag have made indignant remarks about LUDENDORFF's flight to Sweden, where he wrote his book while NOSKE was reorganizing the army and putting down the Bolshevist revolution; LUDENDORFF came back only when Bolshevism was stamped out and the royalties were ready to come in.

But this renowned General seems to have been as laudably careful of his personal interest in this matter as in everything else. He has written his book and made out the best case possible for himself; to be cross-examined on it by men who might be able to check up on some of the statements which otherwise would have passed as true would be, conceivably, extremely inconvenient. And if the adventure lately begun on the Baltic advances favorably LUDENDORFF and all his kind can laugh at parliamentary commissions, for they will be the real rulers of Germany. Conversely, if the commission forces him to testify, it will give us some ground for hoping that free government in Germany is beginning to be something more than a sham.

FREE TRADE IN FOOD.

From the Antipodes comes a proposal to cheapen food for the world by making trade in it free between all nations. The proposal from Argentina contrasts strangely with the proposal at Washington to put a tariff on Canadian wheat, which lies near our flour mills, but would be kept out of them by the boundary barrier. That idea is in keeping with the views of those opposing the Edge bill to finance foreign trade because it would assist the export of food when the cost of living here is high. The theory seems to be that the food we export is taken from the naked and hungry and given to the pampered Europeans. The fact that what we export will bring us what we need more, or the exchange would not be made, is hidden from the economists who fancy that there is profit in trade between ourselves and loss in trade with foreigners. Mr. HOOVER preached many good sermons on freedom of food movement during the war, but none better worth present attention than his statement that political, moral, and economic chaos threatens Europe unless we spare our surplus food for the 100,000,000 who must live on imports from that surplus.

The cheapening of our food is much to be wished, but not at that price. Mr. HOOVER's successor is like-minded with him, and wants the embargo on both exports and imports of wheat to be removed. There is enough bread in the world, and restriction on its going wherever it is wanted, from wherever it is in excess supply, is an economic and social crime. The Representative who introduced the bill putting a duty on wheat and flour is superior to such considerations. He thinks in terms of farmers and millers rather than of consumers in the United States or the world when he says that the importation of Canadian wheat would be a "detriment to the American market." Our farmers are protected by the Government guarantee. Our millers are protected by the trade control justified by the world's abnormal necessities. If Canadian wheat should depress the American market, few would regret the fact that an equal quantity of American wheat would be released for the world demand, which must be above our guarantee, or the wheat would not move.

Every bushel of American wheat sold abroad by our farmers relieves the Treasury from the guarantee to that extent, and is a boon to our taxpayers, who have faced the danger of loss on the guarantee in order that the present surplus above our needs might be produced. The Antipodes are our opposites, but they have the right of their opposition to our political restrainers of trade. There are others who are even more astray than the Representative who wishes to produce here a greater scarcity of food in order, it would seem, that the Canadians rather than ourselves should supply the world's needs.

A NOTABLE BOOK NUMBER.

The Fall Book Number of THE NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW, which will appear as part of tomorrow's issue, conveys a general view of the publishing field in what is held, by those in the book trade, to be the most remarkable book season ever known in this country, and is besides notable in the number of distinguished contributors. Two hundred of the principal books published this Fall are described in summary, and it is interesting to find that, while the tendency in fiction is to get away from the war and its problems and to seek a sort of spiritual vacation in the study of other topics before coming back to the theme which will always have a powerful and enduring fascination for all writers of this generation, of the works in other fields the great majority deal wholly or largely with the war and questions arising from it.

Aside from this survey of the season's publications, however, and the ordinary reviews of books published during the week, the number contains several features of unusual attraction. ALEXANDER BLACK'S novel "The Great Desire" is reviewed by WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS. Mr. W. W. ELLSWORTH'S "Golden Age of Authors" is discussed by BRANDER MATTHEWS, and HILDEGARDE HAWTHORNE reviews Mr. MAURICE'S "The Paris of the Novelists." A sketch of the late HENRY MILLS ALDEN, for fifty years editor of Harper's Magazine, is contributed by JOHN CORBIN, who was for some years associated with him; and a feature of special interest to readers of THE TIMES BOOK REVIEW is a tribute by AMY LOWELL to HELEN BULLIS KIZER, whose sudden death last month will be lamented by those who read her brilliant criticisms in its pages. And a defense, by various writers, of fiction dealing with New York life against the attack made by a correspondent in the previous issue should furnish some light on the question of regionalism in American literature.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Ignoring Wise Admonition.

So obvious and so great were the dangers risked by Miss CONSTANCE GRIGGS when she seized and tried to hold the burglar whom she found carrying on his professional activities in her father's house that what she did cannot be presented as an example to be followed by other women in like circumstances. She might have been killed or severely injured. Moreover, the chances that she would succeed in capturing the thief were so small that it would have been wiser had she run downstairs the moment she saw the man and allowed him to escape unhindered, as he would have done as soon as he knew that his presence had been discovered.

That, or something like it, is what the police advise all householders to do. It is the policy commended by the logic that takes account only of immediate and direct advantages and bases itself on self-preservation as the highest law.

Then there was the case of Miss MARGARET CARPENTER, clerk in the bank at Roselle, N. J. When robbers entered and with leveled pistols gave the order of "Hands up!" she, like the other employés, obeyed, but unlike them she thought of the button in the floor that connected with a buzzer in the nearby police station. So she edged over to where it was and put her foot on it. That, too, was the taking of a big risk in violation of the much-commended rule of "safety first," and the young woman would have been more than justified in not doing it.

But after reason has had its say, instinct speaks up, declares that in both these cases the display of courage was deserving of praise, and gives it. For courage is always admirable. To that conclusion humanity has come as the result of its experience through the ages, and it is not going to change its mind just because it also has learned that there are occasions when courage is a costly virtue and cowardice a profitable vice.

A Question with Two Sides.

Before coming to a final decision in regard to the merits of what Miss GRIGGS and Miss CARPENTER did when confronted by burglars, it would be enlightening if several members of the house-breaking and bank-robbing fraternities could be consulted. It seems more than probable that they would proclaim cordial approval of the rule against resistance—that they would confess that, if everybody shows the same "recklessness" as did these two young women, the practice of burglary as an art or profession will become impossible.

Such profit as there is in burglary now is due to the fact that next to never do its practitioners have anything to fear except from the police. If all the victims selected for exploitation were sure to fight in defense of their rights and their property, the risks of robbery would be vastly increased, and they are not so large now that the business can be called a good one. So it may well be that, while "safety first" has its reward, the opposite policy in the end would bring a reward even greater—and in the form of more safety than "safety first" bestows. Subconscious realization of this probably explains why, in judging courage, instinct leaps to a verdict which reason often contradicts and never reaches except after making a long, slow journey.

For Once They Will Go Hungry.

Bees, being creatures about as tiresome as they are tireless—they have been so much praised for virtues the practice of which nobody enjoys!—will receive no great amount of sincere sympathy because their chances of getting safely through next Winter are reported to be poor. Actual starvation, it is said, threatens them up in New England, because the interminable succession of cold nights and rainy days has prevented the storing up of adequate food supplies. As New England weather cannot have been much worse than the weather all over the country, presumably all American bees are in like bad case, and for once they cannot sneer at crickets and butterflies and the other better-tempered creatures whose ideal is not unending hard work.

If the bees are to go hungry, who cares? It will do them good to learn that industry and a ready dagger are not the perfectly trustworthy protection against adversity and cold weather they thought them to be, and hereafter, perhaps, they will be a little more modest.

And, anyhow, the bees will not be allowed to starve. They will be fed with sweets not of their own collecting, not because they are loved, but because, alone in animated nature except for human kind, they are stupid enough to do unnecessary work and to lay up riches they can never use—an excess that can be, and is, taken away from them by their one competitor in this sort of folly.

A Roosevelt Two-Cent Piece.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A short time ago there appeared in THE TIMES a letter apropos of the issuing of a new coin, namely, a 2-cent piece picturing the face of that great American, Theodore Roosevelt. A reply to this letter was also published, to the effect that such a course would degrade the memory of so fine a man and that his face should be pictured on a coin of higher value—a $50 gold piece, perhaps. How absurd and how narrow, this last! The idea of issuing a new coin at all is, I believe, to inspire a lasting memory and to make immortal the name of Roosevelt in the minds of the people. Pray, tell me, how many of the people are in the habit of carrying $50 gold pieces in their pockets? By all means, let us have the Roosevelt 2-cent piece, as we have the Lincoln penny, so that our poor as well as our rich our boys as well as our men, may have constantly impressed upon them the likeness and the worth of such personalities.

Clothing for the Needy.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In view of the fact that many men and women are unable to seek employment owing to want of proper clothes, the Volunteer Hospital Social Service Committee asks benevolent persons to send it such garments as they may consider suitable. The committee will also receive most gratefully clothing for children who are kept away from school because they have no clothing to cover them. The Winter is approaching and the necessities of the poor can be increased unless something is done now to help them help themselves. Parcels may be sent to the Volunteer Hospital Social Service, Water and Beekman Streets, New York.

GERMANIA VICTRIX!

Faster, comrades! How the moments fly!
The jealous day too swiftly speeds her hours.
Seize them, brothers, ere they hurry past—
Eight for the laborer, three for the Fatherland!

Our power is spent? Our glory in eclipse?
Gaze heavenward, comrades. Through the parting clouds
The glorious Sun of Germany looks down
Upon a land untouched by war's red wrath,
Fair fields and fairer harvests, busy streets,
And cities where the teeming millions move
With single purpose. Does this spell defeat?
World power is in our grasp, world conquest ours!

Alas! poor ruined France! Her silent mills,
Her stricken chimneys and her prostrate walls
Cry out for aid. We must not fail her now.
Work faster, comrades! How the moments fly!
The busy wheels that lately whirred and hummed
Within the walls where war's grim engines grew
Shall tune their melodies to arts of peace—
The thousand ornaments that grace the home:
And playthings fashioned with a cunning skill.
(The little Belgian children must have toys—
Frail instruments of finely tempered steel
Must we supply, and massive rails and bolts
To equip the idle markets of the world.
The lands of Britain and America,
So late our foes, we must not overlook.
Hark, how they wrangle! How they fret and fight!
While wheels draw rust, and lathe and loom are still.
Swifter, comrades! Seize the golden hours!
Eight for the laborer, three for the Fatherland!
Let every port, let every charted sea
Bear cargo labeled "Made in Germany."
Faster! Let your labors never cease!
They won the war? Ha! We will win the peace!

VILDA SAUVAGE OWENS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The editor of a New York weekly, commenting on a statement opposing the intrusion of foreign nations in the settlement of our relations with Mexico, writes as follows: "The Monroe Doctrine takes fairly good care of our relations with Mexico, though the League, if Mexico joined it, would secure that country against unwarrantable intrusions, even by us."

The crux of the whole situation is contained in the word "unwarrantable" as used above. Who is to decide whether an intrusion into Mexico is unwarrantable or not? If the answer is "the League of Nations," the speaker is a pro-leaguer who is willing to throw the Monroe Doctrine into the discard. If the answer is "the United States," the speaker is an American who still believes in the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution, and the Monroe Doctrine.

The only issue involved in the League of Nations is, Shall the United States manage its own affairs or shall a group of nations manage them for us?

Mr. Wilson makes this clear when he says, "The League of Nations is greater than the American Republic." Those who believe this should back the League of Nations, those who do not believe it should oppose the League of Nations.

RICHARD M. HURD.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It was with considerable sympathetic interest I noted the letter of Margaret Ryan in this morning's TIMES. It is a matter deserving of some attention, and not to be lightly dismissed as a woman's vagary. There are many men whose youthful appearance is an actual business asset who must find it equally annoying to announce their ages to an entire neighborhood. For that is what the present registration methods amount to. As a woman, I do not think any of us object to giving our ages to the proper authorities for the sake of the record. But certainly the present method of shouting the information for the benefit of a number of registrars, and incidentally a roomful of waiting voters, is unnecessarily public and annoying. I had exactly Miss Ryan's experience, with the same feeling of resentment, but I gritted my teeth and went through with it.

The same thing applies to announcing one's business or profession to one's curious neighbors. A detective might find it a positive disadvantage to tell the truth about it; so would others of the slightly different or out of the common trades and professions.

Men have apparently not "kicked" about these things, but simply stayed away. Women do not hesitate to attack precedent. The fact that a thing has "always been done that way" is often a very good reason to assert that the time has come to change it. At least, it ought to interest the politicians.

Crime and High Wages.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Present conditions seem to refute entirely the pet theory of the Socialist that want of employment and low wages are responsible for crime. The Sunday pages of THE TIMES and other New York papers, as do the papers everywhere, bristle with "help wanted" ads, yet there was never such an epidemic of robbery, embezzlement, &c. Never was anarchy so rampant in this country, although there is hardly a "soup" house between the Atlantic and the Pacific.

THE MINERS' DEMANDS.

How Cost of Coal Would Increase if They Were Accepted.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Does the public at large realize the proposition that is being considered by the bituminous coal operators of the so-called Central Competitive District, embracing Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois? Is it realized that an increase in the cost of soft coal amounting to from $2 a ton at the lowest to $3.50 a ton in some cases is involved in the miners' demands?

While the conference now in progress in Philadelphia is supposedly in the line of collective bargaining, it is as a matter of fact not bargaining at all, but the consideration of an ultimatum, the miners' representatives having been told to secure the terms set down for them by the recent Cleveland convention or declare a strike.

If a strike is declared it will be nationwide, for while the Central Pennsylvania operators have had no demands presented to them, and the representatives of other districts have received no demands to discuss with their men, although both sides are represented by organizations in practically all parts of the country, the fact remains that these organizations have been ignored, and should there be a failure to agree on terms at Philadelphia, as seems very probable, not only the miners of the Central Competitive District will be called out, but, in accordance with the ultimatum of the Cleveland convention, all the soft coal miners of the country will be called out.

While deploring such a result, there are more than a few coal men who declare that only by such an illustration of what the power of organized labor under radical leadership means at the present time can some even worse catastrophe that a general soft coal strike be avoided.

It will be noticed that reference has been made to soft coal only, but the consumer of anthracite should not deem himself unconcerned. If the bituminous miners gain their contentions the anthracite miners (who are supposed to remain at work for the next few months under a joint agreement) will probably present similar demands, which will involve an additional expense of probably $4 a ton, for there has to be considered not only the matter of additional wages but the increase of overhead charges per ton due to lessened production.

That will probably amount to 25 per cent. in view of the reduced working time proposed, and many coal dealers declare that with such a falling off in what is virtually a necessity of life no law can prevent competitive bidding for the small amount of coal that will be available for the public.

Is it strange, therefore, that the coal operators of the country are in some instances appalled by the responsibility that has been thrust upon them? It is felt that they have to contend not only with the granting of unusual terms in their own industry, but that success in establishing a six-hour day in the bituminous mines would lead to a shortening of hours in many other lines, with the result of greatly lessening the production or much increased expense by reason of double-time overtime. In either event a great increase in cost prices to the public is inevitable.

What coal prices may mount to by reason of expense involved may be judged from the fact that a 60 per cent. increase, with shortening of time as proposed from eight hours to six, would involve an expense of $8 a day for drivers, most of whom are little if any more than boys. They would surely be more than liberally paid at the rate of $1.33 an hour for leading a mule, not necessarily in the dark recesses of a mine, but on the surface, where none of the underground perils exist.

Because of the facts involved there are some operating interests who believe that negotiations should be terminated at once and the miners' delegates instructed to gain authority to enter another joint conference, not with an ultimatum, but with some basis for the collective bargaining which little more than a few months ago organized labor was desirous of.

WOMEN CONTINUE SESSION.

Open Second Phase of International Conference of Physicians.

Women representing fourteen different national organizations attended the convention of women physicians from this country and overseas at the second phase of the long conference being held at the Y. W. C. A. headquarters yesterday. Mrs. Robert E. Speer, President of the National Board of W. C. T. U., opened the meeting.

"We want to put over our technical knowledge to the women of all the world that they may have a better understanding of the significance of social as well as individual health," said Dr. Anna L. Brown. "We have asked the national organizations of women most conspicuous during the past years for educational progress in the emancipation of women to send delegates to consider with us the problems upon which the doctors have been focusing their attention."

SALVATION ARMY FOR LAW.

Intends to Preach Order and Tolerance as Key to Happiness.

Colonel William Peart, Executive Secretary for the Salvation Army in the United States, sounded the keynote of the new day in that organization when, at the close of yesterday's session, he issued this statement:

"For forty years the Salvation Army in the United States has been trying to convince people in the ordinary walks of life and the dark recesses that there is but one safe road to human happiness and that is a proper observance of Christian principle with tolerance for each other.

"Last year we talked to 18,000,000 people in the street, and this coming year we hope to talk to many more because of our ever increasing and strengthened facilities. As a basic principle upon which men may build their hopes for tranquil and successful lives, we shall preach, and are now preaching, the simple doctrine of law and order, without which there can be no progress, intellectual or otherwise, and certainly no attainment of happiness. When men shall pause in their struggle to acquire that which they do not now possess, but which seems to be in the possession of another, and shall become more tolerant and considerate of each other, the possibility of achieving human happiness will loom large. But until that time shall come, there is no hope for human happiness, and the great unrest must grow apace. It is Christianity's duty to assert itself here, to preach law and order, and to induce men and women to think of higher things than material gains, and unless Christianity can win in such an effort, we cannot truthfully say that Christianity has succeeded."

QUITS AS MONTEFIORE HEAD.

Mr. Schiff Resigns as President of the Board of Directors.

Jacob H. Schiff announced last evening his resignation as President of the Board of Directors of the Montefiore Home and Hospital. The resignation, Mr. Schiff said, was sent in last June, but in a "complimentary correspondence" which ensued he was urged by the Directors to retain his post. S. G. Rosenbaum, President of the National Cloak and Suit Company, was elected last Sunday to succeed Mr. Schiff.

Mr. Schiff said that his resignation was due to the fact that after a term of service of thirty-five years he felt that a younger man should take over the duties of the position. He joined the Montefiore Institution at the time of its foundation, and will continue to hold the title of Honorary President.

WILL OPPOSE FRENCH REDS.

Moderate Socialists to Enter Political Coalition Against Extremists.

PARIS, Oct. 17.—The Radical and Radical Socialist parties have decided unanimously in favor of forming a joint electoral organization of various parties opposed to the regular Socialist organization. The proposed coalition would include the Radical and Radical Socialist parties, the Democratic Alliance, the Republican Trade and Industry Committee and the Independent Socialists and represents about half of the present membership of the Chamber.

Negotiations for co-operation between such a coalition and conservative and Catholic representatives, it was reported last week, were under way with good prospects of success, the object being to unite all the political forces in France which are opposed to the Bolshevist and extremely radical tendencies now manifesting themselves in the ranks of the regular Socialist organization.

SEES BILLION A YEAR SAVED BY A BUDGET

Good Says That Probable Expenditure of $5,000,000,000 Next Year Calls for Curb.

NATION IS FOR THE SYSTEM

Says Provision for Non-Partisan Controllers Applies Practical Business Policy to the Government.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—In opening the debate on the bill to create a budget system, Representative James W. Good, author of the measure, in the House today, declared that it was his belief that the estimates for the next fiscal year would reach $5,000,000,000. He said that this great expenditure by the Government called for the adoption of a system which with its checks and balances would prevent waste and extravagances and effect a saving of $1,000,000,000 a year.

The bill under consideration merely provides for an executive budget to be prepared by the President, with proper officers to assist in its preparation, and for an auditing department which shall be responsible to Congress. The bill fails to create a method for the expenditures in Congress in that the old system of eleven committees reporting appropriation bills is maintained and unless there is a change in this respect, it was pointed out by speakers, the system would be ineffective.

Mr. Good has introduced a resolution to change the House rules, taking away from the jurisdiction of the eleven committees the power to make appropriation bills and lodging this authority in an enlarged appropriation committee of thirty-five members. Inasmuch as there is great opposition in Congress to this proposed procedure, Mr. Good announced today that he would not attempt to get his resolution passed at this session.

Senate Plan Action

On the Senate side leaders are preparing to accept the budget system as provided in the pending bill and to amend it so as to fix responsibility for expenditures on one committee in the House and Senate. Senator Penrose will take a leading interest in writing a budget bill which will be effective not only in the formation of the estimates but in the matter of expenditures in Congress.

"To the Sixty-sixth Congress is committed more important questions than have ever before, in time of peace, engaged the attention of the nation's law-making body," said Mr. Good. "This Congress must determine the nation's policy with regard to the railroads, the merchant marine, the control and development of our national resources, our military and naval policies, and last, the problem of bringing our expenditures within a normal revenue. The solution of many of these and allied problems, already too long delayed, must be solved at the earliest practicable moment.

"That this Congress will enact legislation providing for a national budget is certain, so many forces are working for it. Both political parties have declared for it. Business interests of the country are demanding it. The tax payers are looking to it as the only agency that will bring about a reasonable reduction in expenditures to the end that at an early day burdensome taxes, which tend to cripple production and prevent an extension of our foreign trade, may be reduced. That our present methods of making estimates for the expenses of the Government and of making appropriations to meet these demands are unscientific, unbusinesslike, wasteful and extravagant, no well-informed person will deny.

President to Name Controller.

"The bill provides for a Controller General of the United States and an Assistant Controller General of the United States, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and who shall receive salaries of $10,000 and $7,500 a year, respectively. They shall hold their offices during good behavior and shall be removed only by a concurrent resolution of Congress on account of inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office; and the bill provides for the retirement of either of these officials when he shall have reached the age of 70 years.

"By creating this department, Congress will have applied a practical business policy to the administration of the Government's fiscal affairs. Men will be employed as auditors who owe their positions to their training and ability alone. They will be fearless in their examinations and can criticise executives without fear of removal who misuse appropriations or whose offices are inefficiently conducted.

"Congress and its committees will at all times be able to consult with officials of this department regarding expenditures and from whom it will be able to obtain the most reliable information regarding the use to which any appropriation has been put or the efficiency of any department of the Government."

Finance Minister Tells of Difficulties Ahead.

PARIS, Oct. 17. (Havas.)—During a discussion in the Chamber of Deputies today on the Financial bill Deputy André Lefevre, former Minister of Finance, made a long speech on the financial policy of the Government, in which he laid special emphasis on the difficulties the new Parliament would have to face. He expressed confidence, however, in the future of France and that the country would emerge from the present crisis.

Louis Klotz, the Minister of Finance, in reply to Deputy Lefevre, said France was the greatest credit

MRS. B. B. PRATT WED TO PRESTON GIBSON

Rogers Heiress with Income of Nearly $1,000 a Day Married by Greenwich Peace Justice.

DIVORCEE, FAMOUS BEAUTY

Couple First Asked Methodist Minister to Marry Them—Bride Returns Alone to Hotel Devon.

The marriage of Mrs. Beatrice Rogers Benjamin Pratt and Preston Gibson, the forecast of which a day or so ago caused considerable comment and surprise, took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in Greenwich, Conn., a civil ceremony being performed by Justice of the Peace Stephen S. Radford in the Probate Court Building. The couple had guarded their plans and motored from this city to Greenwich.

They first visited the Rev. Minor Howard, pastor of the Diamond Hill Methodist Episcopal Church, who refused to marry them when he learned they did not have a license. Later they obtained a marriage license from Robert Wellswood, the Town Clerk, and then Judge Radford performed the ceremony. The Rev. Howard said afterward that because of divorce he probably should not have married them anyway.

Richardson Preston, of Washington, D. C., a brother of the bridegroom, and a woman friend of Mrs. Pratt, accompanied them to Greenwich. The party returned almost immediately to New York, Mrs. Gibson going to the Hotel Devon, 70 West Fifty-fifth Street, where she arrived unaccompanied by Mr. Gibson. She has been living at this hotel with her two children, Cynthia Ann and Dallas Bache Pratt, the custody of whom she obtained when she received her decree of divorce, on the charge of non-support and desertion, from Alexander Dallas Bache Pratt, in Newport last June.

Mrs. Gibson last evening would make no comment on her plans, and dined informally at the hotel. Her mother, Mrs. William Evarts Benjamin, who is staying at the Hotel Plaza, and who was quoted yesterday as saying that the marriage would have the entire disapproval of both the Rogers and Benjamin families, said last night that she had no statement to make.

The information given out day before yesterday that the then Mrs. Pratt had gone to Newport was erroneous. A dispatch from Newport last evening stated that she had ended her stay at the Reed cottage the latter part of September and had not returned since then. It was also stated that members of the Summer colony there have known for some time such a marriage would be in opposition to the wishes of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin, parents of the bride.

Mrs. Preston has long been a prominent figure in the smart set in New York and at Newport, and is one of the most strikingly dressed women in society. At many of the pageants staged by society before the war her costumes were realistic and dazzling. She was the favorite grandchild of the late H. H. Rogers, the Standard Oil magnate, by whom she was left the income from $5,000,000. This is about $300,000 a year, or a little less than $1,000 a day income. She is tall, dark, and famed for her beauty, giving full sway to her individuality in dress and jewels, having a famous collection of emeralds and topazes.

Her first husband was in the army during the war. Mr. Gibson, who has been twice married and divorced, also won distinction in the war, and has won considerable reputation as an author and playwright.

BABY USED TO AID THIEF.

Messenger Says Stolen Funds Were Transferred in Infant's Carriage.

A Long Island Railroad messenger, George Notice, who is accused by the American Railway Express Company of the theft of $17,000, told in General Sessions yesterday how his wife, Eleanor, his mother-in-law, Mrs. Jennie Whelland, and several of their neighbors had participated in a plot to conceal the stolen funds and had used "baby Murray," one year old. The part of the baby consisted in his being placed in his carriage, after his pillow had been stuffed with the larger part of the loot so that the vehicle might not be searched while en route to the home of Mrs. Whelland.

The messenger is being held by the Federal authorities in $30,000 bail to answer to the charge of robbery. He is said to have confessed his complicity, and will be tried in the United States District Court. His wife and her mother, Mrs. Whelland, John S. Murray, and Mary Campanella were placed on trial yesterday before Judge Rosalsky and a jury in General Sessions, on charges of receiving stolen property, which is a county and not a Federal charge.

On Sept. 4 George Notice said he was in charge of the first-class express matter on the train running from Port Jefferson to Long Island City. Among the packages shipped that day, in currency from banks, were $9,000 from the Northport Trust Company, $4,000 from the First National Bank at Northport, and $3,400 from the Bank of Huntington, L. I., all of which was a consignment to the Federal Reserve Bank at 120 Broadway. With the money were also checks from banks and individuals amounting to $1,644.

Notice told the Court that he put the funds into a bag and went to his home at 282 Tenth Avenue, in this city. His wife was out and he carried the money up two flights to the apartment of John S. Murray. When about to leave the Murray apartment, he said, he heard some one asking for him in the lower hall, and returned to the Murray home, and hid under the bed, at the suggestion of Mrs. Annie Murray. A special agent had followed him from Long Island City, but when the agent appeared Mrs. Murray told him she had not seen the messenger.

"Later on John Murray came in, and William Thorpe, a roomer, joined us," testified Notice. "With my wife and Mrs. Murray and the others we consulted what should be done with the money. We sorted the money in two bundles, and burned the checks, leaving $8,000 in care of my wife, who had Mrs. Murray conceal it temporarily in an oven. We gave John Murray $200. Thorpe, with the remainder of the money, $9,000, went out the back way to Twenty-sixth Street, got a taxi, and met me in Twenty-eighth Street, between Ninth and Tenth Avenues. We went to Jersey City and hid that night in a room in a saloon." Further testimony by Notice showed that he and Thorpe went to Newark, where Notice was arrested, but Thorpe escaped.

Inspector Maurice Newfield and his men recovered $850 at the storage house. They got $6,794 from Notice, together with the jewelry and other articles bought with the stolen funds. What became of the remaining $7,000 has not yet been learned.

STOKES RESISTS ALIMONY.

Says His Income Has Dwindled to $49,675 Last Year.

William E. D. Stokes submitted to Supreme Court Justice Gavegan yesterday affidavits and letters in opposition to an application by his wife, Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes, for alimony and counsel fees pending the trial of his suit for divorce brought against her last January, in which he insists that the divorce suit was not brought as the result of a conspiracy to deprive her of a share in his property.

Mr. Stokes attaches to his affidavits a letter which he says was written by his son on Jan. 31 last, addressed to "My Darling Pop," in which the son refers to his stepmother as "Helen" and says he is "sorry to say" he was guilty of improper conduct with her at Narragansett Pier last Fall. Mr. Stokes said he was ill in New York at the time his wife and son were at the seashore and that influenza and pneumonia developed later. He submits affectionate letters written by his wife to him at the time, in which she concludes, "Lovingly, Helen."

Mr. Stokes declares that nearly all the statements made by his wife in her answer to his complaint concerning his wealth are untrue. He says he never told her that he "couldn't begin to spend his income," and says that whatever income remains after the payment of his living expenses is used to reduce his indebtedness and to pay the interest on his debts. His Kentucky farm is not worth more than $1,000,000, he says. He paid only $54,500 for the 370 acres comprised in it, and it is taxed at only $60,550 this year. His only other realty holdings are a parcel at Long Beach, mortgaged for $15,000, and of doubtful value, two houses in Yonkers, worth $10,000, which have not paid expenses for years, and a place at Cornwall, N. Y. He has no property in Virginia and is not the principal stockholder in the Kensico Cemetery or in any other corporation. He submits figures showing that for the last three years his income was as follows: 1916, $92,127; 1917, $61,098, and 1918, $49,675, including the sum he paid in taxes. He says his income this year will be still less, but that he is continuing to pay his wife $500 a month.

Miss Sommerfeld has contributed $500, and the girls themselves have collected more than $500, and all those who ever received the benefits of the Home are invited to send contributions to Viola Eckstein (Chairman), Catharine Sampson, Rebecca Zimmerman Lewis, Fannie Freyman Samuels, Committee of the Fund.—Advt.

CHURCH WILL REWED INNOCENT DIVORCED

BOTH ORDERS FAVOR ACTION

Prayer for the President to Stand—Urge Honor Field for Our Dead in France.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 17.—Through action of the laymen of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the 1916 general convention, sustained by both clerical and lay delegates today, the innocent party to a divorce may be rewedded in the church. Amendment of the canons to prevent remarriage by an Episcopal priest of a person who has a divorced husband or wife living was defeated today, despite desperate efforts by many of the clergy and a few of the laity to obtain its adoption. Both orders registered a majority against the amendment.

Demands of several delegates who favored the amendment that the church unqualifiedly declare against divorce and remarriage, brought a prolonged argument on the question.

Judge Joseph Packard of Baltimore could see no reason why a minister should not be permitted to remarry the innocent party to a divorce. Dr. C. E. G. Wrigley of Brooklyn maintained that the laymen desired to maintain a dual marriage law. Dr. Randolph H. McKim of Washington, D. C., held the old Church law to be "the best preservative we have of the purity of the family." Dr. William T. Manning of New York declared the amendment necessary "to uphold the highest ideals, moral and spiritual, of marriage." Dr. Malcolm Douglas of Short Hills, N. Y., voiced what appeared to be the general thought of the convention, that the divorce evil can only be corrected by educational effort among the young.

Remarriage If Bishop Consents.

Under the canon the innocent party to a divorce may be remarried in the Church if the Bishop, after examination of court records and with legal advice, consents, although no priest is compelled to officiate. The amendment defeated would make no distinction between guilty and innocent and would absolutely prohibit an Episcopal clergyman officiating in the marriage of persons divorced for any cause.

The commission on revision of the canon has therefore been unable to reach a decision on the proposal, introduced in the 1916 meeting, asking for a uniform federal divorce law.

In their battle to prevent what former Ambassador Page today characterized as "continual nibbling away at the liturgy that has grown into the hearts of our people," the older churchmen in the House of Deputies have carried many of their points. Today they prevented the adoption of a new prayer for the President of the United States which would leave out the petition for the continuance of his "health and prosperity" contained in the present prayer.

Women do not want representation in the legislative bodies of the church, in the opinion of the Constitutional Amendment Commission, expressed to the convention today. On recommendation of the commission, an amendment that would make it possible to elect women delegates was defeated.

The House of Bishops asked the concurrence of the House of Deputies in a resolution for the establishment in France of "an American Field of Honor as a consecrated central spot and monument for our sacred dead, where the bodies of those who are 'forever overseas' may, as far as possible be gathered, and where annually on a day of commemoration, fitting services and observances may be held in suitable buildings erected for that purpose."

APPEAL FOR 'BILLY' DANSEY.

Scores of Parents Signing Newspaper Plea for His Return.

Special to The New York Times.

HAMMONTON, N. J., Oct. 17.—Scores of fathers and mothers here are signing an appeal, which is to be sent to the newspapers, asking for the return of Baby "Billy" Dansey, who has been missing from his home for ten days. The appeal is addressed, "To the Person Having Little 'Billy' Dansey," and says that the mothers and fathers of Hammonton "appeal to you to return in health and safety the little child you have taken away from the home God put him into. You, too, had a mother who loved you. Perhaps she is still living. Think of the pain it would have given her had you been suddenly snatched from her side and your fate remained unknown and a mystery." The futility of gain through such cruelty is pointed out and the appeal closes by begging for the return of the child, "God forgive, guide and bless you."

Laborers tomorrow will uncover several recently filled in excavations near the child's home to set at rest fears that he may have been killed and his body buried in one of them. Detectives and volunteer searchers continued today the futile chase of false rumors and the child's father made a vain trip of twelve miles following another will o' the wisp clue.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., whose engagement to Miss Rachel Littleton was announced in THE TIMES yesterday, has just recently returned from a scientific expedition in Canada, accompanying the expedition in his capacity as correspondent for The New York Herald. He was compelled to return, however, as, having been gassed when overseas, it settled in one of his jaws when he reached a cold climate and he was in a hospital in Canada for a week. On becoming better he was ordered by his physicians to return to New York. His father, Brig. Gen. Vanderbilt, is in Europe and his mother is at the French Lick Springs with her sister, Lady Herbert. Neither of his parents is expected to arrive in New York before the middle of November.

Miss Littleton is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Littleton of Tennessee, and for some time has made her home with her brother, Martin W. Littleton, at Plandome, L. I. During the last Summer the Comet, young Mr. Vanderbilt's yacht, was anchored many times in the bay near the Littleton country estate. Miss Littleton is a vivacious blonde, fond of outdoor life, and is about 18 years of age. So far no plans have been announced for the wedding.

HENRY B. IRVING, ACTOR-MANAGER, DIES

Late Sir Henry's Eldest Son Succumbs in London After a Nervous Breakdown at 49 Years.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—Henry Brodribb Irving, the actor-manager, eldest son of the late Sir Henry Irving, died here today after a long illness due to a nervous breakdown.

He was born in London in 1870 and educated at New College, Oxford, where he took honors in history. He was called to the Bar in 1894, but never practiced, the lure of his father's profession proving too strong. At 21 he appeared with Sir John Hare at the Garrick Theatre in "School." In 1895 he toured the provinces with Ben Greet. Later he joined Charles Frohman's company at the Duke of York Theatre, playing the title part in "The Admirable Crichton."

Mr. Irving had married in 1896 Miss Dorothea Baird, an actress, and in 1906 they toured this country together in "Paolo and Francesca." He managed the Shaftesbury Theatre in 1908-9 and the Queen's Theatre the two following seasons. At various times he produced several of his father's famous plays, notably "The Lyons Mail," "Louis XI.," and "The Bells." His physical resemblance to Sir Henry was remarkable.

He was the author of a Life of Judge Jeffreys, a volume of criminal studies entitled "French Criminals of the Nineteenth Century," and "The Trials of Franz Muller and Mrs. Maybrick." His London address was 7 Gordon Place, W. C. His clubs were the Athenaeum, Garrick, Beefsteak, and Green Room. A brother, Lawrence Irving, also an actor of distinction, was drowned with his wife, Mabel Hackney, in the Empress of Ireland disaster.

MUSIC

By RICHARD ALDRICH.

Piano Recitals by Two Young Women.

Miss Magdeleine Brard, who first played here last season, having returned from her home in France, gave a recital yesterday afternoon in Aeolian Hall. She has now passed her sixteenth birthday, and is scarcely to be put in the class of "infant prodigies"; she is about entering that of the mature artist.

It would be too much to say that she is as yet admitted to the class of the mature artist. Her performance is indeed an astonishing one, but there is still enough about it, and about her, to keep in view the fact that, however gifted, she has not yet put away all childish things. It would indeed be a pity if she had and might cause some apprehension for her future development. There are large opportunities ahead of her for development upon the basis of her impetuous and headstrong temperament and her remarkable technical acquirements. There are time and room for the process of deepening and broadening her art and the attainment of a greater poise and refinement that shall not dampen or suppress her individuality, but rather give it a keener intensity on a greater authority.

Her playing yesterday showed a wide range of powers of a sort that make up a definite artistic individuality, even though a not wholly mature one. Her technical facility is highly developed; so is her insight into several different kinds of music. It may have been prudence and a justified circumspection that kept some of the other kinds out of her program. She began with a long and elaborate series of variations by Glazunow that are variously picturesque rather than highly imaginative, but in which Miss Brard found a great range of color and expression, and reveled in them, squeezing them well of all they contain, and never without full assurance.

Her Chopin playing was by turns impressive, engaging, more or less convincing, amusing even; for here was a soul adventuring among masterpieces and undoubtedly hampering itself little with the excellent precepts and advices so recently conveyed to her by her teachers. The Impromptu, Op. 36, had a great vitality under her fingers, and the second of the preludes a riotous welter of passion, which, in the G minor Ballade assumed proportions disturbing to its broader outlines.

Th fluttering etude from the set Op. 12 is not so much in her style, though there was a demand for its repetition. Saint Saens's transcription of the ballet music from Gluck's "Alceste" she played in a well considered and musicianly manner, and she gained characteristic effects from Liszt's "Sospiro," and, of another sort, in his Eleventh Rhapsody.

Miss Brard is an interesting appearance not only from [illegible] but for what she may become, should her unusual natural gift be developed in the way that leads to a true artistic maturity.

Miss Aurore La Croix.

In the evening Miss Aurore La Croix, who has also been heard before in New York, gave a piano recital in the same hall. While she is a mature artist there are mannerisms in her playing of which she had better take thought before they become so inseparably a part of her style that they are there for good, such as her manner of delivering a melodic phrase always with a little rubato, never quite straightforwardly, enacting always some "expression," and too often the same sort of expression in music of manifold diversity of substance. Thus in Brahms's variations on a theme of Handel's the theme is not one for sentimentalizing, nor are many of the variations.

But perhaps something too much of this, for Miss Lacroix is a player of charm, of vigorous power, of musical discernment. Her great technical skill gives her an easy mastery of most difficulties; she commands a wide range of tonal power—but she has still to cultivate an equally wide range of tonal coloring. Her predilections are for music of a romantic feeling, and this was signified by her program. Besides the Brahms variations and a Chopin group, in which she showed both poetical feeling and dramatic vigor, she played three pieces from Edward Royce's "Set of Eight"—short and slight in texture, yet disclosing a vivid fancy, not brought to a quite conclusive issue—a prelude by Debussy, Cyril Scott's "Garden of Soul Sympathy," three of MacDowell's tonal sketches, and a polonaise by Rubinstein.

Miss Lacroix was heard with interest and applause by a large audience.

Dwarf and Trained Fruit Varieties Planted with Speeches.

Several species of dwarf and trained fruit trees were planted in the demonstration garden in Bryant Park yesterday afternoon by Park Commissioner Gallatin before a large crowd. The guest of the occasion was Charles Lathrop Pack, President of the American Forestry Association.

The Commissioner planted a pear tree which is to be trained in the shape of a fan on a wire trellis, while Mr. Pack's peach tree will be trained along horizontal lines. These little trees produce fruit the first year after transplanting, and because only the choicest varieties are trained in this manner their use along walks or against a fence in the vegetable garden is strongly urged.

Mr. Pack in a speech advocated planting fruit trees in every back yard and vacant lot, wherever soil conditions would permit. The enormous advance in the cost of fruit today should be reduced, and in a few years even city dwellers should be producing a large amount of fruit f. o. b. the kitchen, he said.

Commissioner Gallatin commended the Manhattan gardeners, all of whom had received inspiration at the little garden in Bryant Park, for the enormous amount of vegetables they had produced. In the last season more than 2,000 were cultivated on the vacant lots of Manhattan alone, while thousands more were cultivated in the back yards of every suburb. A conservative estimate of $60 for each 20 by 40 foot garden gave an aggregate yield of almost $125,000 this year, he stated.

Again Defers Action on Berger.

VAUDEVILLE HEARING ENDS.

Commission to Continue Investigation of Mountford's Charges Later.

The vaudeville hearing conducted by the Federal Trade Commission, which began early in February of this year, was brought to an end yesterday. The attorneys for the commission have been given until Nov. 10 to file briefs, and counsel for the vaudeville interests will have an additional month in which to reply. The commission will then set a date for the final hearing.

The investigation grew out of charges made against the United Booking Office, now known as the B. F. Keith Vaudeville Exchange, and other booking offices by Harry Mountford and James William Fitzpatrick, officials of the White Rats, a vaudeville actors' organization whose members went on strike a little more than two years ago. It has been endeavored to show that the booking office is a monopoly, and that the working conditions of vaudeville actors are unfair.

Harry Mountford, or Harry Walsh, as he admitted his real name is, was closely questioned at the concluding session as to his nativity, professional experience and views on labor and union problems.

Mountford was asked what he meant by stating on Thursday that he owed allegiance to no country. He replied that as his status had been changed by taking out his first papers for American citizenship, he could not legally be classed as a citizen of any nation.

"Do you intend to complete your naturalization?" he was asked. "I do," he replied. Asked as to his views on labor, he said that they were best expressed by an ex-President of the United States, Abraham Lincoln, who said that as labor actually produced, it was worthy of more consideration than capital.

Maurice Goodman, counsel for the Vaudeville Managers' Protective Association, represented the booking offices, and the commission has been represented by John Walker, William C. Reeves, and Gaylor F. Hawkins. The hearings have been held in the offices of the Trade Commission at 20 West Thirty-eighth Street.

R. H. Burnside Again Heads Lambs

The Lambs held their annual election late Thursday night in their clubhouse in Forty-fourth Street, and re-elected R. H. Burnside Shepherd for another year. Other officers elected were as follows: Irvin S. Cobb, Boy; Henry Smith, Treasurer; Charles A. Stevenson, Corresponding Secretary, and Edwin Milton Royle, Recording Secretary.

Ed Wynn to Head His Own Revue.

Ed Wynn, it is announced, will head his own company this season in "Ed Wynn's Carnival," a musical revue, to be written entirely by the comedian, and which will be produced in association with B. C. Whitney. Wynn, who was playing in the Shubert "Gaieties of 1919" when the actors' strike was called, obtained his release from the Shubert management, and did not return to the cast of the "Gaieties." His new revue will be booked by Klaw & Erlanger, and will spend the season on the road.

RECITAL
AEOLIAN HALL
Monday Afternoon, October 20th

DURING the war this famous master of the piano devoted his time to putting good cheer into the hearts of those who wore the olive drab of Uncle Sam.

This is Mr. Ganz' first appearance in public since dropping his war work.

Rudolph Ganz at Your Home on Pathé Records

There are twenty-four Ganz numbers on Pathe Records, including selections from the most famous composers of all time.

Come In! Hear Them!

HERBERT AND HUESGEN CO.
18 East 42nd St., near Fifth Ave., New York.

OUT IN INDIANAPOLIS—

or Memphis, or Dallas, or up in Buffalo—a man or woman is writing us a letter.

It says in effect: "I am coming to New York for a fortnight. I shall want seats for the best plays—you know what they are, and you know that I like a well-seasoned variety of plays and musical comedies. I'll leave the rest to you if you'll leave the seats at the hotel."

It would broaden the horizon of the citizen of New York if he could see the volume of just such service which falls to our lot during the year.

The confidence it places in McBride's is the target at which that service has shot for 46 years, since McBride's first office opened in Union Square for the courteous, prompt sale of good theatre tickets.

The citizen of New York knows already that his aldermen made a good bargain for their city by fixing as standard McBride's time-honored service fee of fifty cents over the box-office price.

Good taste has been described as the foundation of the new Capitol Theatre, which will be opened in a few days at Broadway and 51st Street. It is also the intention of the management to have this good taste manifest itself in a cordial and friendly atmosphere distinctive of the Capitol. Therefore, we have selected our staff—from the attendant who greets you at the entrance to the usher who seats you—with this end in view. Every individual in our employment is paid the usual salary scale plus an estimate of what the usual tips would aggregate; and all our employes have pledged themselves neither to solicit nor to accept gratuities. Your choice of seats will always be obtainable at the box office eight weeks in advance. This means no "premiums," no "tips," no "favoritism," and uniform courtesy to all. Other phases of the policy will be discussed further in this space.

New Garment Body to Meet.

At the Hotel Astor on Nov. 20 will be held the first dinner and meeting of the recently organized American Wholesale Garment Association, which was formed to serve as a clearing house for jobbers and wholesalers who find themselves with surplus or out-of-season stocks on hand that might find a market in other localities. The original purpose of the association was to distribute lists of all excess stocks held by members, so that those in different parts of the country could be able to select goods for which they might find buyers. This would permit them to obtain supplies at low prices and would also eliminate to a large extent the losses heretofore suffered by houses which had either to throw away their surplus stocks or sell them at marked sacrifices. At the meeting other ways in which the association might work for the benefit of its members will come up for discussion. The Central Bureau of the organization, which is situated in this city, is under the management of S. W. Meltzer, local buyer for L. Jonas & Co., Nashville, Tenn.

COMMODITIES PRICES.

More Advances Made, Though Foodstuffs Show Some Declines.

More advances were shown this week in Dun's list of wholesale commodities prices than at any other time since the Administration began its efforts to reduce the high cost of living. They outnumbered the declines for the week by an even two to one, but in spite of this the foodstuffs showed a slight excess of declines over advances. The list for the week showed a total of only 48 changes in a list of 313 articles. Of these 32 were advances. Last week, when there were 49 changes, the advances totaled but 21.

The following list gives the minimum wholesale prices quoted on selected standard commodities this week. They are corrected to yesterday, and with them are given comparative prices for last week and the corresponding week a year ago:

The foodstuffs revisions of the week showed twelve to ten in favor of the declines, and many of the advances were seen in the less important edibles. No change in flour took place in the local market, nor did hams go one way or the other. Bacon, however, declined still further. In the Chicago provisions market mess pork and live sheep did not change, but an advance was registered by Middle Western lard. The declines out there were contributed by live beef and hogs and by short ribs.

In the local market for dairy products the expressmen's and longshoremen's strike had a noticeable effect. Under the influence of delayed shipments creamery butter went up 4 cents a pound, while State dairy stock, common to fair, advanced 2 cents. The best cheese showed a slight rise, but the undergrades did not change. The quotation for fancy nearby eggs, which were very scarce, was so nominal in character as not to be given. No advance was seen in the price of the best Western eggs.

The feature of the week in the fresh fruits was the break of $1 a barrel in fancy apples, as well as a drop of 50 cents in common stock. Declines in apricots and prunes were the only changes in the dried fruits. Revisions in the vegetables were limited to a drop in choice pea beans. No changes were shown in the list for teas, but in the coffees No. 7 Rio and No. 4 Santos both declined. The spices contributed upturns in mace, cloves, and white Singapore pepper, the rise in cloves being quite marked. The drops in spices were supplied by nutmegs and black Singapore pepper.

The Fall variety of Irish mackerel advanced $7 a barrel for the week, and there was also a rise of 4 cents a gallon in New Orleans molasses. In the grain list a drop in corn was more than offset by advances in oats, rye, and malting barley. The metals took on a generally firmer tone, at least so far as the minor ones were concerned, and advances were shown in lake and electrolytic coppers, spelter, lead, and tin. Both the hide and the leather list failed to show a change one way or the other for the second successive week. Japanese raw silk advanced to new high records this week, and with it went the best grade of Chinese (Shanghai) silk. There was no change of moment in the silk fabrics business.

The combined list for drugs, chemicals, dyestuffs, and oils showed but 8 changes, of which 5 were upward. The features were the general strength of essential oils and the sharp recovery that occurred in linseed oil. Very sharp advances in resin and turpentine marked the week in the naval stores, in which a rise in pitch was also shown.

More active trading and bullish reports from primary markets resulted in higher prices here on both heavy and lightweight burlaps. In the cotton goods the features consisted of sharp advances in several gray goods constructions, notably printcloths and sheetings, and the pricing of denims for the first quarter of 1920 at the same levels that prevail at present.

Prepare Rates to German Ports.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Freight rates for American steamers to and from German ports are being prepared, it was said at the United States Shipping Board today. Rates to Hamburg, Bremen, and Danzig are included in the new list, which is to be issued within a week. The rates will be substantially higher than the pre-war schedules, it is stated.

Woolen Man Meets High Prices.

As an indication of what others may do, the method to be used by the representative of a woolen house to meet the high cost of clothing is worth giving. Several visits to local stores convinced him that prices were much higher than he thought he ought to pay, so he recalled a money saving device of a friend. This consisted of having his suit "turned" at a total cost of less than a quarter of what a new outfit would mean. He is of the opinion that many other men will adopt the same expedient rather than pay the prices which are now being asked.

New Rain Hats for Women.

Due principally to the vogue for raincoats of oilskin, women's storm hats of the same material are now being offered here. The frames of these hats are made in the latest styles, but the models are all small. Each is trimmed only with a band of ribbon. The hats in question are said to be very practical and to be more desirable than rain caps. In addition to their practical value, they are attractive in appearance.

"Not Making Worsteds."

Retail clothing salesmen in some instances are taking decided liberties with the truth in meeting the situation forced on them by the high prices asked for clothing. For example, a customer learned recently that "the mills were making no more worsteds," a statement which was made to cover the shortcomings of a line wholly consisted of very inferior fabrics. Such subterfuges, it was pointed out by a clothier, are not going to do the retailers any good even though they may sound all right to bridge over a difficult situation.

Dress Goods and Silk Fancies.

Both the dress goods and the silk mills have quite decided to stick to staple and semi-staple materials for some months to come. The reason for this is that conditions are considered too abnormal to warrant making goods that might depreciate considerably if there was a sudden change in the situation. The manufacturers in both lines seem content to let the fancy and novelty business go to English and French houses, despite the possible loss in prestige that may result. But it is also believed that the import lines will not gain so much ground until the manufacturers abroad have an opportunity to settle back to old production lines.

Suggests Co-operative Action.

With the extension of express robberies to the garment lines the suggestion was made yesterday by a clothing manufacturer that it might be well for these trades to secure the co-operation of agencies that have grown familiar with such operations in the past. He pointed out that the good work being done by the Silk Association of America might profitably be extended to other industries which are not as well acquainted with how the problem ought to be tackled. The losses in the clothing line have been especially heavy of late, and the same thing holds true for other garment lines in which values have increased to a point where thieves are attracted.

Platinum Brings Premiums.

Apropos of the assertion in THE TIMES that dealers' prices on crude platinum range up to $150 an ounce, it was said here yesterday that the supply is now so scarce that, in spite of the deterrent effect on its use caused by the jewelry workers' strike, manufacturers who need the metal are buying it from one another at a premium of $10 an ounce. This makes the selling prices $140 an ounce for soft platinum, $150 for medium, and $160 for hard. Medium hard and platinum contain, respectively, 5 and 10 per cent. of iridium. The reason for the platinum scarcity is said in the trade to be the cutting off of shipments from Russia, which makes this market dependent for its supply on the mines in Colombia, South America.

Fancy Goods Selling Freely.

No falling off in the demand for beads and beaded articles is indicated in the latest reports to come from the fancy goods and notions trade. Necklaces of glass beads, both in black and colors, are going very strongly, and the call for beaded bags of all price lines is keeping up its previous pace. Wholesalers are being hard put in many cases to supply celluloid and metal frames enough for use in making these bags at home. Trimming beads of all kinds and in all colors are much wanted. The "high" colors in beads especially are being sought, and are in scant supply as a result of the heavy demand for them.

Bargain Sales Open New Field.

According to what J. J. Evans, in charge of the bargain sale at the Bush Terminal Sales Building, has learned from manufacturers this experiment has opened up a new field in merchandising. At the end of a season, he said, many manufacturers and mill agents find themselves with stock on hand which frequently has to be sold at less than cost for the want of a ready market. The bargain sale, he explained, is giving the manufacturers a way of finding buyers for their surplus stocks who are just as anxious to secure such merchandise as the sellers are to dispose of it. Not only has the number of the buyers who have been present at the sale been large but the list includes store managers and representatives from all sections of the country.

Gray Goods Buyers Active.

Gray goods buyers were again active in the local market yesterday, and large sales were made at advancing prices. Printcloth sales included 38½-inch 64-60s at 18 cents for delivery all the way to April 1. Free selling of 39-inch 68-72s for nearby delivery took place at 22½ cents. Some business for early 1920 was done on this construction at 22 cents, but toward the close sellers were asking 22½ cents for shipments past the turn of the year. Buyers paid 23½ cents for 39-inch 72-76s in a large way for this year's delivery, and sellers were asking the same for 1920. Sales into 1920 were reported on 80 squares at 28 cents, with 28½ cents asked for

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Professional Buying Lifts Stocks in Late Trading—Belgian Loan Postponed.

After fluctuating uncertainly during the greater part of the session yesterday, the stock market took heart from the decline of call money from 10 to 6 per cent. and scored a moderate advance from the morning levels near the close. A few industrial stocks disclosed much strength in final dealings, but they were exceptional. Considering the steel and allied shares as representative of dealings, the day's result was expressed in gains running from good-sized fractions to 2 points. In fact, it was entirely fair to judge the undertone of the market by the steel stocks, for these pointed the way when the hardening tendency of prices appeared. Interest in the market outside that of the professional traders seemed to be no more than moderate, and from this the deduction was permissible that the covering of short sales when the credit situation turned easier was a major influence in buying of the last hour. Southern Pacific was strong, but most of the railroad shares moved indifferently.

The most interesting development of the day was contained in news that negotiations for a large loan to Belgium had been discontinued for the time being. The original program, which came under discussion a month ago, called for $50,000,000, which recently was reduced to a tentative total of $25,000,000 when advices from the Belgian Treasury stated that requirements for funds in the United States were not as large as previously estimated. A significant factor in the situation lies in information that Belgium has been supplied with a substantial credit in London in the last few days, the size and terms of which were apparently not known in local banking quarters yesterday. Presumably, the Belgian financial authorities have been able to secure accommodation at the British centre on a more favorable basis than was proposed here, which may or may not have been comprised solely in the primary cost of the credit. British trade and finance work hand in hand, and it may be that the Belgian Government is to receive consideration in the purchase of needed goods through the loan which has lent a particular advantage to borrowing in London. While the situation is still obscure from this end, the indications are that the Belgian Treasury is preparing to buy raw material and finished products in the British market, that otherwise might well have been bought in the United States. Banking comment yesterday forecast a postponement of Belgian borrowing in this country until the forepart of next year. In a few days the announcement of the French "cities" loan, to meet Nov. 1 maturities and provide several millions of fresh funds, is looked for.

Reports of the capture of Petrograd from the Bolshevist armies brought further advances in Russian bonds yesterday, and the current quotations rose about three-quarters of a cent to a fraction above 5 cents per ruble. Sterling declined to 4.15¼ for sight drafts, a quotation approximately 7 cents to the pound below the maximum rate of last week. Francs were slightly easier than on Thursday, but the other exchanges practically stood still.

Neither the security nor exchange markets found a real incentive for price changes in domestic developments. The Street paid attention to dispatches from Washington which showed closer co-operation than the day before between group representatives at the Industrial Conference, but final results will doubtless be awaited before the market followers attempt to interpret new relations between capital and labor in terms of quotations.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Belgian Equipment Orders.

The abandonment, or at least the indefinite postponement, of the Belgian loan, which it had been believed would be arranged within a short time, may have a direct effect on the equipment orders which were expected from Belgium when credit arrangements had been completed. It is, of course, quite possible that some sort of equipment finance corporation may work out details for extending the necessary credit, but the fact that the loan is placed out of the immediate future does not make for confidence. If the $50,000,000 loan has been arranged in England it means that Belgium will do a great deal of purchasing there, and prospective business is cut off from this country. Whether England is prepared to sell equipment in the volume needed is doubtful, but it goes without saying that in so far as Great Britain can supply the demands, Belgium will be prepared to place the orders.

Steel Exports Heavy.

The exports of steel and iron during August amounted to $75,831,962, or a gain of $15,563,897 over July. In June the exports amounted to $120,985,703, and in August of 1918 they were $97,111,045. The figures for the eight months ended with August show that exports were only $21,344,553 below the exports for the same period in 1918, when war work was providing a big stimulus to the sending abroad of iron and steel. The exports of the eight months of this year amounted to $684,661,816, as compared with $706,006,369 in the corresponding period of last year. These figures prove conclusively that American iron and steel are in heavy demand in the world markets.

Endicott Johnson Gains.

An advance of nearly 11 points in Endicott Johnson stock yesterday showed this issue as one of the strongest on the board. A similar degree of strength was evidenced in other stocks having to do with the manufacture of shoes or leather goods. All of these companies are reported to be earning substantial profits, and the fact is frequently pointed out that the drive against the high cost of living has apparently made little progress as regards the price of shoes or of other leather goods.

Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies.

Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies moved up 3½ points in yesterday's trading, and at one time touched 191½. There has been some good buying of this issue lately, as reports have come forth of the plans which the company was making for the development of its oil properties. A fleet of tankers has been ordered, and additional contracts for ships may be placed shortly. There is a disposition on the part of many to consider this concern as being among the oil rather than the shipping companies.

Call Money and the Investor.

According to bankers who have the handling of new issues of securities, the high rates for call money have had virtually no influence whatever on the investment market. This, they say, is because of the radical change in the investment market. Time was when big institutions, like insurance companies, were the mainstays of the investment market, and for them high call money rates were attractive as furnishing temporary investment; the permanent investment of their surplus funds could wait for a few days until the fancy call rates ended. But now, with the big institutions heavily committed to Liberty bonds and using their surpluses to reduce loans on these securities, they are pretty well out of the market for new issues. Meanwhile, the people who are buying new securities are the little fellows who never did, and probably never will, take any interest in the call market.

Usury.

There is a question in the minds of some observers of events as to whether the usury laws, so far as they fix interest rates, should not be gone over. They argue that as the prices of all other commodities is gone up, the price of this one should be allowed to go up, too. Of course, they do not expect to find any widespread, popular sympathy behind them; rather the reverse, in fact, but if one subscribes to the theory that credit is a commodity, then the argument must indeed be considered as having some warrant. As a matter of fact, it is well known that the usury laws can be got around—through the charge of premiums, commissions, and so forth, and those who contend that it would be better to legalize a higher rate than the one now allowed point to this as one of the reasons which make it desirable that some change be made.

Liberty Loan Consolidation.

There was a sale yesterday of $20,000 Liberty First-Second 4¼ per cents at 100.96, a loss from the previous day of 1.04. Such a fluctuation in a Liberty bond of any description is unusual, to put it mildly, and, according to bond dealers who come in contact with the public, furnishes another argument for the consolidation of the whole war debt into one class of securities. But even if no consolidation is attempted, most bond dealers think it would be well for the Treasury to undertake some action which would clear up the "First-Second 4¼" muddle.

Germany's Gold.

For the third week in succession, the Bank of Germany's display of condition showed only a nominal change in the gold item. Apparently, the Germans have liquidated their debt to the Food Administration. At the present time, the Reichsbank holds approximately $150,000,000 of the metal, which, while it is not a great amount, might well serve as a nucleus for a readjusted gold reserve. If Germany can keep what she now holds she will at least be considerably better off than it was thought she would be when there was some idea that payments for the barest necessities would denude her of all her gold before the Peace Treaty was ratified.

Pere Marquette in Favor.

With the exception of Southern Pacific, which has been the consistent leader of the railroad shares for many weeks, Pere Marquette was the outstanding feature in yesterday's trading. On an increased volume of business there was an advance to a high for the day at 23, with the closing quotation only fractionally lower, the net gain amounting to 1⅜ points. This increased interest was attributed in large part to the steadily improving earnings which have been reported to the Interstate Commerce Commission in recent months.

Many Companies Prosperous.

Commenting on the market levels of several industrial stocks yesterday, a banker objected to a general statement that market values were out of proportion to earnings. He said: "Prices may be out of proportion in the case of a few industrial issues, but taken as a whole they are below their actual value as I see it. A short time ago an accountant told me that he had audited the books of more than 100 industrial concerns and was amazed to find that all of them were showing net earnings far in advance of the past three or four years even after the elimination of all taxes."

California Packing Gains 5¼.

Recent sustained accumulation of California Packing shares brought about a wave of speculative buying of the issue yesterday with an accompanying net advance of more than five points. More than 27,000 shares changed hands, and a new high for the year was made at 81, which was also the closing quotation. The company showed earnings last year of approximately $10 a share, and rumors are now being circulated that earnings in the current year are running at a substantially better rate.

Great Northern Control Unchanged.

The report that control of the Great Northern Railroad was passing to Eastern hands as the result of the election of two New York bankers to the Board of Directors was characterized as most improbable yesterday by a Director. He stated that the election of the New York men simply meant that the former policy of having a St. Paul board exclusively was giving way to a directorate more representative of the country at large.

$25,000,000 LOAN TO BELGIUM PUT OFF

Country, However, Probably Will Be Heavy Borrower Here in the Not Distant Future.

BETTER TERMS IN EUROPE

Requirements Here Made Less Urgent by $50,000,000 Credit Obtained in London.

The proposed loan to Belgium, which was at first expected to be for $50,000,000 and which was tentatively reduced to $25,000,000 a few days ago, probably will not be brought out until after the first of next year, according to information which became available yesterday. Belgium's requirements of credit in the United States have been considerably reduced recently and, in addition, that country has about closed negotiations for a large loan, said to be somewhat in excess of $50,000,000, with London bankers. Because of these facts and because, it is understood, there was some lack of unanimity among American bankers as to the terms and conditions which should apply to a foreign loan of the size of the proposed Belgian transaction, the operation will hardly come to maturity during the remainder of the current calendar year.

It does not follow, however, according to international bankers, that Belgium will not be a large borrower here in the not remote future. For the time being, she is expected to get along with her present balances, which were derived from the $50,000,000 acceptance credit which was arranged for her last March and which is to run for a year, and through the sale here of Belgian Treasury bills, as well as by advances made by the United States Treasury. But early next year, when the big acceptance credit nears its due date and when the fund available for United States Treasury advances becomes exhausted, it is expected that Belgium will have to apply to the American market for further accommodation.

Meanwhile, her needs for credits here have been reduced materially and some bankers think they will be still further reduced because of the credit Belgium is getting in London. In London interest rates are substantially below those now obtaining in this country, which means that Belgium probably will get more favorable terms there than she could get here, and with the exchange situation heavily in favor of London, as opposed to New York, there is every reason why Belgium should borrow there to the extent of her requirements if that is possible.

As pointed out by a prominent banker yesterday, Belgium, along with almost every other country in the world, can buy more favorably in other markets than here, simply because the American dollar is at such a heavy premium in all the world's exchange markets. Undoubtedly this fact will tend to divert business to other markets which might, under more favorable exchange conditions, come here. Only for goods which cannot be produced, or which are not produced, elsewhere, will the Europeans come here, bankers say, and thus the United States is likely to suffer because of our unusual position in the world credit market.

The so-called "Three Cities" loan, amounting to $36,000,000, made here in 1916 for the benefit of the three French cities of Marseilles, Lyons and Bordeaux, which matures on Nov. 1, will be re-financed and the terms of the re-financing will be announced early next week, probably on Tuesday or Wednesday. The old loan, which was equally divided between the three cities, will be paid off in cash and the three cities will receive new money to the extent of $3,000,000 each. In other words, the new flotation will be of $45,000,000, instead of the $36,000,000 needed to meet the maturity.

The United Kingdom loan of $150,000,000, which has been reduced to slightly less than $133,000,000 through purchases in the open market, also matures on Nov. 1, and well informed banking opinion is to the effect that this maturity will be paid off in cash without any new appeal at this time to the investment market.

FRANCE IS FAST LOSING THE BALANCE OF TRADE

Imports $800,000,000 Over First 8 Months of 1918—Exports Increase $140,000,000.

PARIS, Oct. 17.—Statistics of the Customs Department, showing that the balance of trade is running against France at the rate of 1,750,000,000 francs a month, throw light upon the depreciation of French exchange. Importations for the first eight months of the year total 18,500,000,000 francs, which is about 4,000,000,000 francs more than those of the same period of 1918, while exportations amounted to only a little more than 4,000,000,000 francs, showing an increase of about 700,000,000 francs over the corresponding period of the year before.

Food products entered into the total importations to the amount of 5,000,000,000 francs; industrial supplies, 8,000,000,000 francs; and manufactured articles, 5,000,000,000 francs. The biggest single item of importations is wheat, amounting to 1,395,000,000 francs, as compared with 92,000,000 francs in 1910. Imports of sugar and coffee show an enormous increase over the normal. Cotton and woolen cloth enter into the total of industrial supplies to the extent of 750,000,000 francs of the increase. These figures have made a great impression here and are being used to advocate a renewal of the campaign for vigorous restrictions in consumption and intensified efforts at production.

EXPECT BIG EGYPTIAN ORDER

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—The Daily Mail says that British locomotive builders are considerably exercised over the prospect of a contract for fifty locomotives of modern type, worth at least £500,000, being placed with an American firm by the Egyptian State Railways, which usually buy about four-fifths of their locomotives and rolling stock from Great Britain.

If this contract should go out of England it would mean a loss of some £200,000 in wages, and it is alleged by British firms that the conditions under which they were invited to bid did not afford them sufficient time.

The American firm concerned has informed a representative of The Daily Mail that the contract has not yet been definitely let, "although we expect it is going to be, all right."

Royal Bank of Canada 50 Years Old

The Royal Bank of Canada, which maintains an agency in New York at 68 William Street, yesterday celebrated its fiftieth anniversary. The Royal Bank of Canada maintains 606 branches, located in all parts of Canada, with foreign branches in the United States, the West Indies, and Central and South America. The total assets of the institution as of Aug. 30 last were $470,870,450.

EXPORTERS URGE SENATE TO RATIFY

FAVOR AID TO RUSSIANS

Redfield Urges Americans to Unite in Gigantic Credit to War-Ruined Peoples.

Early ratification of the Peace Treaty was urged on the Senate in resolutions adopted yesterday by the American Manufacturers' Export Association, which held its final session at the Waldorf-Astoria. The expression of the association on this subject read:

"Resolved, That the delay in ratifying peace has contributed to industrial hesitancy and stagnation throughout the world, as well as to social unrest, and for that reason the manufacturing exporters of the nation, who have observed the effect of the delay upon their foreign business, urge upon the Senate the necessity for early action on the treaty of peace."

In another resolution the association asked that, after peace should be concluded, American manufacturers should be at liberty "to resume trade with the people of the Central Powers in the manner that their individual interests may dictate."

Another resolution called on the Government to give economic assistance and generous credit facilities to Russians seeking to restore order in their country, and urged that effort be made to supply the necessities of life to the Russian people in parts of the country where life and property were secure.

Secretary of Commerce William C. Redfield spoke at the dinner of the association at the Waldorf-Astoria last night. He said a great adventure in finance on the scale of the war loans should be repeated in this country to restore Europe commercially and industrially and enable European nations to pay their debts to this country and to resume trade relations.

"A large part of the world, he said, "is in want and misery, subject to the guests of mental passion which lead to Bolshevism. Meanwhile, the great, free, democratic America, talks, while the world waits.

"One cannot plan to grant credit to a nation when there is no certainty that nation will continue to exist. In this condition the Czechoslovaks[ia], the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, Greece, Poland and other States.

"How shall we carry out the suggestion that we must furnish the goods and the means of payment for them? Let me suggest an idea based upon recent legislation. We must have means of credit adequate to the demands upon us. That means a credit-providing organization beyond anything we have ever known, too big for the banks, too big for the manufacturers, too big for the merchants and farmers, and only to be made big enough by combining the support in the form of sane effective action of all these forces. Let us suppose a great organization with $500,000,000 of capital or, perhaps, $1,000,000,000. Into it are combined all the commercial groups I have mentioned. It must be inclusive of the whole round American commercial interest. That organization would take the securities, in varied forms and amounts, of nations, States, provinces, cities, utilities, industries, railways, and of other forms of corporate activity, and could so distribute its undertakings as to average the risk.

"Against these securities it should issue its own debentures at a commercial rate of interest and in amounts that the big and little investor might purchase. These would be invested in our enterprises, and so the good work would go on."

A resolution was adopted calling on Congress for legislation to attract men of high attainment into the diplomatic service, by placing salaries on a reasonable level, freeing appointments from political influence and providing proper training for such posts.

William G. Sharp, ex-Ambassador to France, who talked on this subject, said the pay for diplomatic and consular posts put the incumbents in the class of "coolie labor."

Assistant Secretary of State William Phillips, speaking on this subject, said: "The salaries of the diplomatic officers are a farce. A young man is expected to give up brilliant opportunities offered at home for services in foreign capitals at a salary of $1,500 a year. If he makes a success and remains in the service ten or twelve years, he may expect a salary of $3,000.

"I see constantly the look of discouragement upon the faces of men who deserve the highest consideration from their country for efficient and loyal service. The discouragement of men of experience pervades the lower ranks of the service and affects the whole system. Granted that Congress increases the salaries, there can be nothing which will bring the diplomatic service up to the highest standards until the Secretary is assured that, if he makes really good, his field of usefulness will be increased by promotion to the rank of Minister and eventually even to Ambassador."

Frank A. Vanderlip, who created a stir by his gloomy picture of conditions in Europe in an address before the Economic Club four months ago, said the situation in Europe has been getting worse.

"We see England continuing to print money," he said, "and she has now printed well over £300,000,000 of her currency notes. Senator Owen tells you the banks of this country have $40,000,000,000 of resources and they are failing to function, so far as foreign credits are concerned. Forty billions of resources means the banks of this country owe on demand $40,000,000,000.

"Do you know that France was able to balance her foreign trade in a large measure because of her foreign investments, and that 25,000,000,000 francs were invested in Russian securities, and that income has been cut off? Five billion francs were invested in Turkish securities, and that income no longer exists. She had large investments in the Balkans, and no income from that source is available. France has 37,000,000,000 francs of paper money outstanding, and it is steadily growing. The same situation exists in Italy."

CONDITIONS IN TRADE.

The weekly trade reports indicate that the general business situation has been less adversely affected by the widespread labor unrest and the other unfavorable factors than might have been expected, and in some lines there has been positive improvement during the last week, with promise of further improvement unless new and far-reaching strikes occur. In commenting on the situation Bradstreet's says, in part:

"Trade and industrial reports are rather more favorable. Cooler weather, the advance of the season, insistent calls for merchandise to fill previous orders, freer buying by jobbers for next year, the gradual disappearance of the steel strike as a retarding element, the calling off of the longshoremen's strike, and the resumption of export operations are among the elements favoring wider trade distribution. Less is heard of price reductions, and, indeed, some primary lines, such as iron and steel, cottons, and silks, note demand improved, with prices strong or higher. Of course, the situation is not without its flaws, chief of these being the continued unsettlement of labor, the inefficiency resulting in inadequate production in scores of lines, and last, but not least, the threat of a tieup of bituminous coal production by a strike set for Nov. 1. The stock market has had to cope with higher rates for money, 8 to 15 per cent. on call and 7 to 8 per cent. on time, this week, and is active but very irregular, while the pressure of cotton, grain, and miscellaneous exports bills is reflected in weak and lower exchange rates. Clearings are slightly below last week, due to the holiday, but heavily in excess of last year, with outside cites showing least reaction from recent totals. Failures do not seem to grow perceptibly, and collections are better than in recent weeks."

Dun's Review says:

"No important branch of enterprise, either in the producing or distributing field, wholly escapes the deleterious effects of the continued widespread unrest of labor, which prevents the general expansion of commercial activity that stable conditions would stimulate. Strikes on transportation lines in the East have aggravated an already seriously unsettled situation, causing freight embargoes and further delaying deliveries of essential commodities, and the threat of a walkout of bituminous coal miners on Nov. 1 is another disturbing element. With many thousands of workers idle, output are not alone restricted, and the paucity of supplies intensified, but increased firmness is imparted to prices, and Dun's list of representative wholesale quotations, which recently disclosed a preponderance of declines, now shows more advances than recessions.

"Considering the different handicaps that beset business, it is remarkable that so many advices are of a favorable and optimistic tenor. Even with the purchasing power reduced by the present spread of unemployment, and notwithstanding the high prices, there is still a noteworthy movement of goods into consumptive channels, and the operations of some interests are only limited by their ability to meet the demands made upon them. While it is contended that the extreme prices are checking retail trade in some quarters, yet there is no general disinclination to take in any merchandise that is under order, and buying of an emergency character has become more of a factor in lines where production continues disorganized by labor troubles."

DELAYS ACTION ON PORTER.

Farms and Markets Council Awaits the Close of Battle's Inquiry.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Oct. 17.—No action was taken by the State Council of Farms and Markets when it met here today on the recommendation of Governor Smith that the council remove Dr. Eugene F. Porter from office as Commissioner of Foods and Markets. The council issued a statement after its session in which it said that a letter would be sent to the Governor, declaring that it could not take up his recommendation to remove Dr. Porter until after George Gordon Battle had concluded his investigation of the department. In a preliminary report Mr. Battle recommended to the Governor that Dr. Porter be removed.

Mr. Battle continued his investigation into the bureau today. Charles M. Stern of Albany, former Deputy Attorney General, who recently resigned his office, was on the stand for a long time. In the course of his testimony Mr. Stern intimated that the people of the State were practically at the mercy of food adulterators because the chemistry division of the Farm and Markets Department was not able to handle all the work it should do. Many cases brought against persons charged with violating the food law had been dropped, he said, because the analyses of the articles sold by them were not made in time, and the cases automatically lapsed under the statute of limitations.

SAYS WAR TAUGHT PEOPLE TO SAVE

Accounts Have Increased 43 Per Cent., Bank Association Manager Reports.

STATE TOTAL $2,500,000,000

Announces 3,600,000 Persons in City Have Deposits Averaging $600.

The part which savings banks throughout the country must take in reconstruction and in offsetting the spread of radicalism was discussed yesterday at a luncheon of the New York Savings Bank Association at the Hotel Astor. The object of the National Thrift Week, which begins Jan. 17, and has been indorsed by the American Banking Association and other financial organizations, was explained and received with enthusiasm.

Milton Harrison, executive manager of the Savings Bank Association, speaking of the aftermath of the war, said he believed the people generally had learned the necessity of thrift. He said that since the armistice the forty-three savings banks in this city had shown an "unusual increase" in deposits. The increase in savings accounts, he said, amounted to about 6 per cent., or a greater gain than in any previous similar length of time.

Mr. Harrison said 3,600,000 persons owned savings accounts in this city, with deposits ranging from $1 to $3,000, the average being about $600. He said 43 per cent. of the city's population owned savings accounts. The 141 savings banks in the State, he added, hold about $2,500,000,000 in reserve, or an amount equivalent to half of the total assessed value of New York County.

Mr. Harrison said that relatively few Liberty bonds deposited with the savings banks have been withdrawn, and that the average Liberty bond holder has a savings account of approximately $150. By far the larger number of savings accounts owned by men who entered military service in the war have not been withdrawn, he added. The principal cause of the saving desire, he said, was that the people had been awakened "to the necessity of continued thrift."

R. Ingalls, Director of Research of the Bankers Statistics Corporation criticised the Mondell bill and Senator Calder's bill, saying that if they should pass the Federal Reclamation Service and the Farm Loan act would be unnecessary, while savings banks and other private lenders would have to get out of the mortgage business. He said mortgages would become risky investments, and that building and loan associations would have to abandon their thrift and savings features.

COTTON OPENS HIGH AND THEN DECLINES

SPOT MARKET STILL ACTIVE

Sales in South Are Heavy—Shipments for the Week Show Total of 103,702 Bales.

Cold and wet weather and a strong Liverpool market helped the local cotton market at the opening and sent prices up 21 to 32 points in the first hour or so. Then, on hedge selling from the South and some scattered profit-taking around the ring, the market reacted slightly, but did not lose much until afternoon, when it declined to the maximum losses of the day, which were 22 to 33 points under Thursday's closing. From this level there was nominal recovery before the close, but final prices were only about 5 points above the low, at best, and several options closed at the day's poorest.

The market, on the whole, was without sensational feature. There was a brisk demand for contracts at the outset, and when this was satisfied prices eased off mainly because of the paucity of demand, rather than because of any aggressive selling. Such selling as there was was not of the kind to do any great damage to values, and certainly did not give the impression that any strong bear party was at work trying to hurt the market. On the contrary, it was mostly selling of futures against spot purchases, and as the spot markets have been extremely active of late, the selling ran to somewhat greater proportions than is usual under the circumstances.

The Liverpool spot market was again very active and the price was a trifle higher than on the previous day. Sales for the day totaled 15,000 bales, of which about half represented American. Sales at Southern spot markets were also heavy and shipments for the week totaled 103,702 bales, mostly out of Galveston, New Orleans and Savannah. This was the highest total of shipments for any week in some time. Slightly less than 50,000 bales went forward last week.

Yesterday's quotations follow:

The New York Telephone Company obliges to engage a number of young ladies from 17 to 23 years of age for permanent positions in its Accounting Offices.

Experience is not necessary, as the work is easily learned and all new employees are given thorough instructions by women supervisors.

The hours are from 9 to 5, with one hour for lunch and half days on Saturdays.

The working conditions and surroundings are excellent—light, well-ventilated offices, sanitary lunch rooms, comfortable rest rooms, &c.

The salary of $11 per week for beginners is increased at the end of the second month and increases are given at frequent intervals thereafter.

The opportunities for advancement to higher paid positions are unlimited.

Applications for these positions may be made, either in person or by letter, to Miss M. A. Kerwin, Room 502, 25 Church St., New York City.

When the Telephone Operator leaves the switchboard to enjoy one of the Off Duty Periods that break up the work of the day, she spends her time in a Rest Room as cozy and attractive as any one could ask for. That's one of the reasons why Telephone Operating is an Ideal Occupation.

Call "SPRING OFFICIAL" and ask about it.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

MRS. S. IS THE SOLE SUPPORT OF HER five little children, the youngest of whom is two months old. The husband, a steady, hardworking tailor, suddenly lost his mind five months before the baby's birth and was committed to a State Institution for the Insane, thus leaving upon his wife's shoulders the full responsibility of the household. She struggled bravely along, doing washings and day's work, but when the baby came her health was so impaired that she was forced to give up and finally appealed for aid to the Brooklyn Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor. The physician reported that Mrs. S. is anaemic and suffering from a serious cardiac condition which will necessitate her giving up all strenuous work for some time. How is she to support the family until the return of the father; pay the rent, provide food, clothes and milk for the baby as well as milk and eggs for herself, which last is a most necessary item for the return of her health and strength? Will you help her? Make checks payable to Frank L. Sniffen, Treasurer of the Brooklyn A. I. C. P.

ENLISTING WOMEN TO CUT LIVING COST

Palmer Announces an Organized Effort to Aid the Government Campaign.

SIMPLICITY IN DRESS URGED

Nation-Wide Movement Planned to Reduce the Number of Styles in Women's Wear.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Attorney General Palmer's High Cost of Living Committee met in special session at the Department of Justice today to canvass what had already been achieved in the campaign to lower prices and to consider the present sugar shortage and other elements in the situation. Secretaries Daniels and Baker, and Judge John Barton Payne of the Shipping Board, were asked to attend the session to enable the members of the committee to ascertain what steps might be devised for disposing of surplus foods of the army navy, and Shipping Board more quickly. But Secretary Baker was unable to attend the meeting, and this feature of the matter will be taken up in a few days in a separate conference by Attorney General Palmer, Secretary Baker, Secretary Daniels, and Judge Payne.

Those present today were Attorney General Palmer, Secretary Glass, Secretary Daniels, Secretary Houston, Assistant Secretary Leffingwell of the Treasury Department, Messrs. Colver and Murdock of the Federal Trade Commission, Judge Payne of the Shipping Board, and Messrs. Garvin, Ames, and Figg of the Department of Justice.

It was announced that the women of the country were being organized in a movement in favor of thrift and economy in the purchase of necessities and in favor of discouraging extravagance in styles of dress. One of Mr. Palmer's agents reported to the Attorney General that he had conferred with Mrs. Edward P. Costigan, Chairman of a special committee appointed by the Consumers' League and the League of Women Workers, who informed him of these developments of the women's campaign.

A special committee of women, with a Chairman for each State, will be appointed to present the facts to the housewives and women generally and ask their co-operation in any movement that may be started by the Administration to reduce the high cost of living.

A corps of speakers will start out in a few days on an extended trip through the Central and Western States to discuss with women's organizations the food and wearing apparel problem, to urge conservation in buying, to insist upon the necessity for increased production, and to present facts to convince the consumer that this is not the time to buy unnecessarily, anticipating further increases in prices, but to conserve and await the reduction in prices of all necessities.

The conference was informed that the Attorney General's representative and agreed to furnish to Mrs. Costigan and the representatives of these women's organizations facts and figures regarded as indispensable for the proper presentation of their argument to the women of the nation.

The women with whom this representative of the department conferred were found to be ready to accept responsibility, with the support of Administration agencies, in launching a great national movement along patriotic lines to minimize changes in styles, the fact having been developed that the manufacturers and designers of women's wearing apparel now put on the market between six and eight different styles a year. They now charge from 8 to 35 per cent. for the style itself.

The women of the Consumers' League, the League of Women Voters, and the Federation of Women's Clubs have promised to co-operate in this movement, and it is believed it will go a long way toward developing the campaign.

Attorney General Palmer reported to the conference today in some detail on the prosecutions that had been instituted under Sections 6 and 7 of the Food Control act. He reported that three cases had been successfully prosecuted, as follows:

United States vs. José Bermejo. Hoarding flour. Pleaded guilty; sentenced to three months in jail and fined $250.

United States vs. Hulett Merritt. Found guilty by jury of hoarding sugar. Sentenced to five months in jail and fined $5,000. Case pending on appeal to Circuit Court.

United States vs. Dumnavant & Hammer. Charged with hoarding sugar. Case set for trial. Defendant Hammer will plead guilty.

These, Mr. Palmer said, were the first convictions secured under Section 6 of the Lever Food Control act by the Department of Justice.

WILL SELL SUGAR AT ROLLING STORES

Temporary Relief of Shortage to be Begun Monday by Distribution of Two Carloads.

INVESTIGATING HOARDING

Food Administrator Announces That Owners of Hidden Supplies Must Release Them for Public Sale.

Beginning Monday the rolling stores operating on the city streets will bring temporary relief in the matter of the sugar shortage, according to Commissioner of Markets Jonathan C. Day, who announced yesterday that two carloads of sugar had been received for distribution. The sugar will be sold in one-pound packages, one package to a customer, and the price, the Commissioner said, would be in the neighborhood of 10 cents a pound.

Federal Food Administrator Arthur Williams stated yesterday that he had been informed that sugar is being hoarded in various places in the city, one place having 100 barrels of sugar stored away, and another place having 4,000 bags stored. He said he was making an investigation and if evidence of sugar hoarding was found the owners could be forced to release it for immediate public distribution.

Mr. Williams said that the Fair Price Committee had been getting a number of complaints from consumers to the effect that dealers were selling sugar only in half-pound lots.

"The committee feels that, in view of the present extreme shortage of sugar and the actual impossibility of getting it for many stores, grocers having a scanty supply are justified in so limiting their sales as to make the distribution as wide and as equal as possible," said the Food Administrator.

"The question of price is between 5 and 6 cents for half a pound. Where 5 cents is charged the sugar would be sold at 10 cents a pound, which is less than its cost to the grocer. Where the charge is 6 cents, it is possible that there will be a little more profit to the grocer, but the committee feels that it would not be justified in asking the grocers to sell their half-pound packages at 5 cents. It of course cannot name a difference of less than one cent, making the 6 cent charge seemingly justifiable at the present time as a temporary measure and until the more serious shortage of sugar has been passed."

The following statement was issued by the Food Administrator relative to the fair price list made public today:

"In groceries there is a tendency toward higher prices of fresh creamery butter, lard, Blue Rose rice, and salmon. The committee understands that the increase in the cost of fresh butter is due to the reduced milk supply, and is a normal condition at this season of the year. As the reason for the other increases are not clear, the committee is quoting the prices of the first part of the week. There is also a reported tendency toward higher prices in storage butter. Any change in this respect will be based upon cost rather than the so-called market conditions cannot be accepted by the committee. It should be pointed out that the storage butter is equal to the fresh butter in every respect, and may be purchased at an average of 4½ cents a pound less.

"The only change in meat prices is a reduction of 1 cent a pound for lamb items. As this price has remained level during the last four weeks, it is a reduction of 1 cent below the cost of five weeks ago, a very gratifying change."

Overpayments on Income Taxes

"To pay a tax lawfully imposed is a patriotic duty—to resist one not clearly imposed is equally a patriotic duty."

Justice S. Ostrander, Surrogate's Court, September 5, 1919.

OVERPAYING taxes is just as wrong as underpaying—and many taxpayers by incorrectly interpreting the tax requirements have unknowingly paid more than their share.

This organization is prepared to review the returns filed by any taxpayers who may have overpaid income-and-profits taxes. It is a patriotic duty we owe our government.

Listen—

You Biggest City in the World!

Always in a hurry—aren't you? You are so crowded for time that you can never spare more than half an hour to watch a man crawl up the face of a skyscraper, or to study how a chauffeur puts on a new tire, or to learn from a window demonstrator about an automatic necktie.

Give me one minute and I'll show you how to enjoy shaving every morning for the rest of your life. Isn't that a more instructive use of a minute than to watch them frying flapjacks in a Childs' window?

The reason that you find shaving so painful is because you rub half dissolved, caustic soap into the pores, raising a lot of tiny blood blisters which the razor slices off. The trouble isn't that your beard is tough or your skin tender—your soap is bad and your method is wrong.

Get a tube of Mennen Shaving Cream—which perfectly softens the toughest beard without rubbing in with fingers. Squeeze half-an-inch of cream onto a brush that is full of cold water. Whip up a lather on the point of your chin and spread gradually over the face, adding water constantly. Use three times as much water as any ordinary lather will carry. Work this Mennen lather in for three minutes with the brush only. Keep your fingers out of it.

Then enjoy the most glorious shave of your shaving career. Note afterwards that your face doesn't feel as if someone had rubbed salt into it but on the contrary is smooth and free from smart.

Come on—New York—be a sport!

Give Mennen's a trial and be not only the biggest but the happiest city.
